The two ministers offered the brief Ash Wednesday observance for people who can't fit the more traditional, longer Ash Wednesday services into their schedule.

2 South Haven pastors team up to to serve Christians on the go

SOUTH HAVEN — Christians throughout Southwest Michigan observe the start of the Lenten season each year by going to church and taking part in Ash Wednesday services.

Over the years, though, pastors have found that not everyone can take an hour out of their work day to attend the service and receive ashes on their forehead to symbolize the 40-day Lenten season of fasting and prayer that leads to the celebration of Easter.

To deal with the situation, a growing number of pastors are offering a quicker way to observe the start of Lent – Ashes To Go.

Two such ministers from South Haven, the Rev. Jeffery Dick of First Congregational Church and the Rev. Travis Wilson of Peace Lutheran Church, decided to give the concept a try.

"For many, the times that we offer worship do not always work," Dick explained. "So this year we are trying to do something different."

From 7:30 a.m.-9:30 a.m. Wednesday, the two ministers stood outside under a display tent in the Congregational Church parking lot to perform a brief Ash Wednesday service for people on the go.

Arlene Campbell of South Haven was one such individual. As she stood under the tent in front of the two ministers, they welcomed her, said several prayers and then spread ashes in the sign of the cross on her forehead.

"God meets us not just in worship, but in the midst of life," Wilson said. "We offer the opportunity to remember our faith to those whose schedule makes it hard to stop and pray with others today."

Wilson performed similar Ashes to Go observances when he served as a minister in Jackson. Dick decided to partner with him this year to offer the abbreviated service because it reminded him of an incident that occurred a couple of years ago when he and his wife were eating at a local restaurant following an evening Ash Wednesday service.

"Our waitress mentioned that she had worked all day and was unable to attend a service. She felt sad for missing Ash Wednesday," Dick said. "My wife still had ashes on her forehead, so I told the waitress I could bless her right here and now. She was stunned. I used some of my wife's ashes and offered her a short blessing and then made the mark of the cross on her forehead. It was a wonderful moment that I will never forget."

LEGO-themed events return to St. Joseph

Citywide festival begins today with Builder's Bash at Silver Beach Carousel

By TONY WITTKOWSKI
HP Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH — It's time to hit the bricks again as the annual Build Your Way Around Town event returns to Southwest Michigan.

The citywide festival in St. Joseph that incorporates LEGO displays and activities, kicks off from 4-8:30 p.m. today with the Builder's Bash at the Silver Beach Carousel, with creations by artists ages 4-18 on display through April 11.

Next comes a series of different LEGO events and activities.

The Big City Build will be at the Shadowland Ballroom from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

LEGO love continues with LEGO Bingo from 1-2:30 p.m. March 7 at the Curious Kids' Museum, 415 Lake Blvd.

LEGO Mania will be held from 5:30-6:30 p.m. March 9 for kids in grades 4-6 at the St. Joseph Public Library, 500 Market St.

On March 14, from 5-10 p.m., there will be a Kids Night Out event at the Benton Harbor-St. Joseph YMCA, 3665 Hollywood Road. The event, for children ages 1-12, costs $18 for pre-registration and $25 at the door.

The Krasl Art Center, 606 Lake Blvd., will host LEGO Skyscraper Building for ages 5-7, and a Stop-Motion Animation Workshop for ages 8-12, on March 21. Two sessions will be held for each activity, from 11:30 a.m-1 p.m. and 2:30-4 p.m. Pre-registration is required.

An elementary schools art show will be hosted at the Box Factory for the Arts, 1101 Broad St. Two sessions will be from noon to 4 p.m. on March 21 and 28.

Weekly prize drawings will be held March 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30. Participants can enter at participating locations, and winners will be announced on the St. Joseph Today Facebook page.

Economists see growing recession risk as coronavirus spreads in U.S.

Stock traders work at the New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday

WASHINGTON — As the coronavirus outbreak enters a potentially dangerous new phase, with cases widening in Europe and expected to spread in the United States, economists have begun to raise their estimates for the risk of a global recession and fallout to the American economy.

Economists say the stock market selloff in recent days reflects a reassessment of the likely magnitude of the hit to corporate earnings in the virus's wake, suggesting the economic pain could last longer and the recovery may not be as swift as initially thought.

"Businesses of all kinds, in a lot of places, being impaired really (made) me skeptical that this is something that would fade quickly and from which we would recover quickly," said Carl Tannenbaum, chief economist at Northern Trust in Chicago. "And that realization is now cascading through both to investors and to policymakers that this is a situation that is more serious than initially thought."

Many American companies rely on overseas sales and production in China for a significant share of their revenue and profits. And a growing number of firms, including Apple, Starbucks and the chipmaker Qualcomm, have lowered their earnings guidance in recent days.

Tannenbaum now sees the Federal Reserve cutting interest rates by a quarter of a point in April. Just a few weeks ago, most analysts expected the central bank would stand pat on rates for the rest of the year.

BENTON HARBOR — In the wake of the spread of the coronavirus, Whirlpool Corp. announced it is taking precautions at its facilities overseas that are near quarantined areas.

The Benton Harbor-based appliance maker released a statement Wednesday to address concerns for employee safety in other countries.

"We have implemented teams at global, regional and local levels to enable the company to take any actions that might be needed in each of the regions in which we do business," the statement read. "Some of these actions are of a practical nature, including

Police thwart man who threatened to jump from overpass bridge

By HP STAFF

PAW PAW — First responders on Tuesday stopped a 48-year-old man from jumping off a bridge onto a busy interstate, police said Wednesday.

Officials at the Van Buren County Central Dispatch were alerted to the potential suicide at 6:30 p.m. when they received a 911 call telling them that police had "two minutes to get to the overpass in Paw Paw."

Three agencies – Van Buren County Sheriff's Department, Michigan State Police and Paw Paw Police – quickly went to Interstate 94's M-40 Highway overpass, according to the Van Buren County Sheriff Department's news release. One of the deputies saw a vehicle stop in the middle of M-40 Highway. The driver then proceeded forward with the vehicle and crashed into a guard rail. He then exited the car and tried to climb up on the rail, ready to jump.

However, he was pulled down by a deputy. Michigan State Police assisted in detaining the man and placing him into custody before he could jump off the bridge.

Police did not say who made the phone call to 911.

During the investigation, deputies determined the man was intoxicated. He was treated at a hospital prior to being taken to Van Buren County Jail for operating a vehicle while intoxicated.

No serious injuries were sustained to any party involved, according to the news release.

Lawmakers warn Pentagon about shifting money to border wall

By ANDREW CLEVENGER
CQ-Roll Call (TNS)

WASHINGTON — Top members of the House Armed Services Committee assailed Pentagon leaders Wednesday, warning that the administration's reprogramming of $3.8 billion of Defense Department money for a border wall could damage its relationship with Congress.

Echoing a letter they sent to Defense Secretary Mark T. Esper on Tuesday, Reps. Adam Smith, D-Wash., and Mac Thornberry, R-Texas, said the reprogramming request could lead to Congress stripping the Pentagon of its ability to move funds around.

"This basically says that Congress doesn't spend the money, the president does," said Smith, the panel's chairman, calling the shift of funds to pay for a southern border wall "very, very damaging" to the Pentagon. "The message it sends is that the Pentagon's got plenty of money."

Thornberry, the committee's ranking member, drew a distinction from the White House taking $3.6 billion last year to pay for the wall and this year's request. Some of those funds came out of excess funds in military personnel because the Army didn't hit its recruiting goals, but this time, Congress has specifically appropriated the funds for other purposes, largely to buy weapons.

"It is substituting the judgment of the administration for the judgment of the Congress," Thornberry said.

Thornberry said he supported a barrier on the southern border, but had misgivings about the undermining of Congress' constitutional role in raising forces and funding the national defense.

"The result of this will be greater restrictions on the department's ability to move money around to meet changing needs, and the country will suffer as a result," Thornberry said. "I hope I'm proved wrong, but I'm concerned about where this is headed."

Democrats raised similar objections to last year's reprogramming but were unable to thwart it, either via a policy provision in the annual defense policy bill, or by voting to end the president's national emergency declaration along the southern border.

Esper, testifying alongside Gen. Mark Milley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, in support of the administration's $740.5 billion budget request for national security in fiscal 2021, had to walk a fine line.

Push back too hard and he risks enraging Congress, which funds the Defense Department. But he also has to show support for the policies of the president who appointed him.

"To deal with that emergency, we need a barrier system," Esper said. "I know that (reprogramming) is legally available to us."

Although other Republicans took issue with the reprogramming, none raised the constitutional concerns voiced by Thornberry.

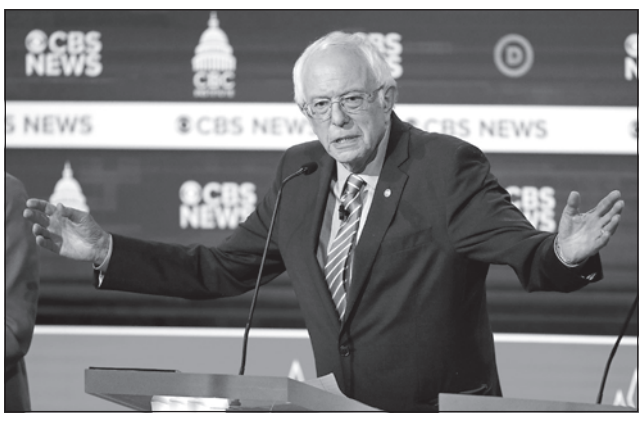
Analysis: Democratic candidates wake up to Sanders' potential to beat them all

By DAVID LAUTER
Los Angeles Times (TNS)



Patrick Semansky
Democratic presidential candidates Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., speaks during a Democratic presidential primary debate at the Gaillard Center, Tuesday, in Charleston, S.C., co-hosted by CBS News and the Congressional Black Caucus Institute.

An air of desperation suffused the Democrats' presidential debate almost from its first moments Tuesday night as six of the candidates confronted a reality they had previously tried to wish away: The seventh, Sen. Bernie Sanders, was on the verge of beating them all.

As recently as their last debate less than a week ago in Las Vegas, most of the rivals treated Sanders gingerly and focused their fire on former New York Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg. Sanders responded by clobbering his rivals in Nevada's caucuses and pouring resources into Saturday's primary in South Carolina and next week's 14-state Super Tuesday contests with a goal of putting a swift end to the nomination fight.

Having come close to booting away the prize most of them have spent more than a year pursuing, the other Democrats lost little time Tuesday in making clear that Sanders – his positions, his judgment and his experience – would be the prime topic of the night.

But while their efforts gave the debate plenty of passion, and may have planted doubts in the minds of some voters toying with supporting the Vermont senator, they did nothing to resolve the biggest problem the non-Sanders candidates face: Too many of them have stayed in the race too long.

Sanders began this year's campaign with one great strength – the loyalty of his supporters on the party's left, many of whom backed him in his campaign against Hillary Clinton four years ago. That backing has never wavered and has allowed him consistently to win the support of somewhere between a fifth and a quarter of Democratic voters.

In a two-person race, support from one quarter of the voters is a recipe for failure. But as President Trump showed in his race for the Republican nomination in 2016, a committed minority can be the ticket to success so long as your opponents divide the opposition vote.

Sanders' opponents have done just that: All agree that some among them should quit the race, but none believe that he or she should be the one to do it. Over the last several months, they compounded Sanders' advantage by largely deciding not to challenge him, mostly giving him gentler treatment than his rivals endured.

Former Vice President Joe Biden, as the presumed front-runner for much of the year, came under sustained attack during several debates. Those criticisms and his sometimes-halting responses clearly damaged his campaign.

Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts, whose standing rose steadily last spring and summer, got intense pressure in the fall to specify how her proposed healthcare plan would work – and how she would pay for it – even as Sanders largely skated by with bland admissions that he hadn't put forward any similar accounting.

Other candidates, like California Sen. Kamala Harris, endured scrutiny over previous parts of their careers – years as a prosecutor in her case. That eventually helped push her out of the race.

Sanders drew less of that attention because, until this week, none of the others saw him as their principal rival.

Many Democratic strategists subscribed to the widespread belief that support for the Vermont senator had a natural ceiling. Sanders' ardent followers would not desert him, but other voters would not turn to him, they reasoned. Attacking him would just anger his supporters, with little chance of benefit, they thought. The wise strategy, they said, was to leave Sanders on an island of the party's left and focus on winning the much larger continent of the center.

Sanders' crushing victory in Nevada demolished those theories. He burst through his presumed ceiling and won 34 percent of the first round of votes in the party caucuses and nearly two-thirds of the state's convention delegates.

Perhaps as important, Sanders demonstrated in Nevada that his claim of support from Latino voters was real and that he had begun to make inroads among African American voters as well, addressing one of the chief weaknesses of his previous run for the nomination.

That set off panic among many Democratic elected officials, especially those from centrist districts, who do not relish the prospect of running with Sanders at the top of the ticket.

Meanwhile, the Vermont senator boosted his efforts in South Carolina, looking to land a blow that could end Biden's chances even before Super Tuesday, and stepped up his campaign both in Massachusetts, where polls show he could beat Warren on her home turf, and Minnesota, where he might be able to do the same to Sen. Amy Klobuchar.

Those prospects forced rivals to suddenly reorient their debate strategies.

In the debate's opening minutes, Bloomberg accused Sanders of being Vladimir Putin's favored Democrat, saying the Russians hope he will deliver a second term to Trump. Biden blamed him for supporting legislation backed by the National Rifle Assn. that gave gun manufacturers immunity from certain lawsuits.

Pete Buttigieg, the former mayor of South Bend, Ind., charged him with not leveling with voters about how he would pay for his programs. Klobuchar said Sanders offered "broken promises that sound good on bumper stickers."

Even Warren, who spent most of the last year in an ultimately self-defeating effort to prevent any daylight between her positions and those of Sanders, got into the act. She sniped at his minimal record of accomplishment in Congress, saying that she and Sanders both want big, progressive change but that only she was willing to be "someone who digs into the details to make it happen."

Pope Francis observes usual Ash Wednesday customs in time of virus

By NICOLE WINFIELD and JIM GOMEZ
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Pope Francis celebrated the Ash Wednesday ritual that marks the opening of the Catholic Church's Lenten season in traditional fashion while greeting the public in Rome as other Masses were canceled in northern Italy over fears of the coronavirus outbreak.

Francis and a long line of priests, bishops and cardinals walked in a procession through Rome's Aventine hill into the 5th-century Santa Sabina basilica for a late-afternoon Mass. Neither the priests nor the faithful wore face masks, but Rome has largely been spared the virus as Italy's national case count grew to more than 440.

Other Catholic countries took Ash Wednesday precautions. In the Philippines – Asia's only majority Roman Catholic country – priests sprinkled ashes on the heads of the faithful rather than making the mark of the cross on their foreheads to avoid physical contact.

"Wherever the ash is placed, on the forehead or on the head, the feeling is the same, it's uplifting," Editha Lorenzo, a 49-year-old mother of two wearing a face mask, told The Associated Press in Manila.

At the Vatican, Francis held his general audience as usual in St. Peter's Square and offered prayers to people sickened by the virus and the medical personnel treating them. In the crowd of thousands, a handful had masks on their faces.

"I want to again express my closeness to those suffering from the coronavirus and the health care workers who are treating them, as well as the civil authorities and all those who are working to help patients and stop the contagion," Francis said.

Francis kissed at least one child as he looped through the square in his popemobile and made a point of shaking hands with the faithful sitting in the front row. Usually, he only waves. He also greeted prelates with a handshake at the beginning and end of the gathering, but it appeared most clergy were refraining from kissing Francis' ring or embracing him, as they normally would do.

In his remarks, he urged the faithful to put down their cellphones during Lent and pick up the Bible instead.

"It is the time to give up useless words, chatter, rumors, gossip, and talk and to speak directly to the Lord," he said.

While Francis went ahead with his usual Ash Wednesday plans, the patriarchate of Venice canceled the Mass scheduled for St. Mark's Basilica, after a handful of elderly people in the lagoon city tested positive for the virus.

The surrounding Veneto region is one of two northern Italian regions where clusters of cases emerged in Italy. The other is Lombardy.

In the Philippines, the Rev. Victorino Cueto, rector of the popular National Shrine of our Mother of Perpetual Help in the Manila metropolis, said the practice of sprinkling ash on heads of devotees was a precaution to prevent the spread of infections but actually is an old tradition based on the Old Testament.

"It's better to be cautious," said churchgoer Evet Accion.

Court sides with Trump in 'sanctuary cities' grant fight

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press

Manuel Balce Ceneta / AP

NEW YORK — The Trump administration can withhold millions of dollars in law enforcement grants to force states to cooperate with U.S. immigration enforcement, a federal appeals court in New York ruled Wednesday in a decision that conflicted with three other federal appeals courts.

The ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan overturned a lower court's decision ordering the administration to release funding to New York City and seven states – New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Washington, Massachusetts, Virginia and Rhode Island.

The states and city sued the U.S. government after the Justice Department announced in 2017 that it would withhold grant money from cities and states until they gave federal immigration authorities access to jails and provide advance notice when someone in the country illegally is about to be released.

Before the change, cities and states seeking grant money were required only to show they were not preventing local law enforcement from communicating with federal authorities about the immigration status of people who were detained.

At the time, then-Attorney General Jeff Sessions said: "So-called 'sanctuary' policies make all of us less safe because they intentionally undermine our laws and protect illegal aliens who have committed crimes."

In 2018, the Justice Department imposed additional conditions on the grant money, though challenges to those have not yet reached the appeals court in New York.

The 2nd Circuit said the plain language of relevant laws make clear that the U.S. attorney general can impose conditions on states and municipalities receiving money.

And it noted that the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly observed that the federal government maintains broad power over states when it comes to immigration policies.

In the past two years, federal appeals courts in Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco have ruled against the federal government by upholding lower-court injunctions placed on the enforcement of some or all of the challenged conditions.

"While mindful of the respect owed to our sister circuits, we cannot agree that the federal government must be enjoined from imposing the challenged conditions on the federal grants here at issue," the 2nd Circuit three-judge panel said in a decision written by Judge Reena Raggi.

"These conditions help the federal government enforce national immigration laws and policies supported by successive Democratic and Republican administrations. But more to the authorization point, they ensure that applicants satisfy particular statutory grant requirements imposed by Congress and subject to Attorney General oversight," the appeals court said.

The Justice Department praised the decision, issuing a statement calling it a "major victory for Americans" and saying it recognizes that the attorney general has authority to ensure that grant recipients are not thwarting federal law enforcement priorities.

House makes lynching a federal crime, 65 years after Till

Emmett Till's photo on his grave marker in Alsip, Ill. Sixty-five years after 14-year-old Emmett Till was lynched in Mississippi, Congress is set to approve legislation designating lynching as a hate crime under federal law. The bill, named after Till, is intended to send a powerful message to confront violent racism and hatred that continues decades after the black teenager was murdered for allegedly whistling at a white woman.

WASHINGTON — Sixty-five years after 14-year-old Emmett Till was lynched in Mississippi, the House has approved legislation designating lynching as a hate crime under federal law.

The bill, introduced by Illinois Rep. Bobby Rush and named after Till, comes 120 years after Congress first considered anti-lynching legislation and after dozens of similar efforts were defeated.

The measure was approved 410 to 4 on Wednesday. The Senate unanimously passed virtually identical legislation last year, although that bill wasn't named for Till. President Donald Trump is expected to sign the bill, which designates lynching as a federal hate crime punishable by up to life in prison, a fine, or both.

Rush, a Democrat whose Chicago district includes Till's former home, said the bill will belatedly achieve justice for Till and more than 4,000 other lynching victims, most of them African Americans.

Till, who was black, was brutally tortured and killed in 1955 after a white woman accused him of grabbing her and whistling at her in a Mississippi grocery store. The killing shocked the country and stoked the civil rights movement.

"The importance of this bill cannot be overstated," said Rush, a member of the Congressional Black Caucus. "From Charlottesville to El Paso, we are still being confronted with the same violent racism and hatred that took the life of Emmett and so many others. The passage of this bill will send a strong and clear message to the nation that we will not tolerate this bigotry. "

Rep. Bennie Thompson, D-Miss., who represents the area where Till was abducted and murdered, called the anti-lynching bill long overdue, but said: "No matter the length of time, it is never too late to ensure justice is served."

House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer, D-Md., used similar language to urge the bill's passage. "It is never too late to do the right thing and address these gruesome, racially motivated acts of terror that have plagued our nation's history," he said, urging lawmakers to "renew our commitment to confronting racism and hate."

The bill was unanimously supported by Democrats. Three Republicans – Louie Gohmert of Texas, Thomas Massie of Kentucky and Ted Yoho of Florida – opposed the bill, along with independent Rep. Justin Amash of Michigan.

Gohmert said he supported the bill's concept, but preferred that those accused of lynching in Texas be tried in state court, where they could face the death penalty.

Massie said he opposed the expansion of federal hate-crime laws. "A crime is a crime, and all victims deserve equal justice," he said in a statement. "Adding enhanced penalties for 'hate' tends to endanger other liberties such as freedom of speech."

Democratic Rep. Karen Bass of California, who chairs the Congressional Black Caucus, called lynching a lasting legacy of slavery.

"Make no mistake, lynching is terrorism," she said. "While this reign of terror has faded, the most recent lynching (in the United States) happened less than 25 years ago."

Although Congress cannot truly rectify the terror and horror of these acts, Bass said, a legislative body that once included slave owners and Ku Klux Klan members will belatedly "stand up and do our part so that justice is delivered in the future."

Colorado poised to become 22nd state with no death penalty

By JAMES ANDERSON
Associated Press

DENVER — Colorado is set to become the 22nd U.S. state to abolish the death penalty after lawmakers on Wednesday approved a repeal bill that Democratic Gov. Jared Polis has pledged to sign into law.

Passage had been virtually certain with Democrats holding a substantial majority in the House – even with several Democratic lawmakers casting "no" votes for the 36-27 repeal approval vote.

The bill, passed by the Democrat-dominated state Senate in January, would apply to offenses charged starting July 1 and would not affect the fate of the three men on Colorado's death row who face execution by lethal injection. But Polis has suggested he might consider clemency for them if asked.

"All clemency requests are weighty decisions that the governor will judge on their individual merits," said Polis spokesman Conor Cahill.

Colorado's last execution was carried out in 1997, when Gary Lee Davis was put to death by lethal injection for the 1986 kidnapping, rape and murder of a neighbor, Virginia May.

Wednesday's vote came after lawmakers spent three days engaging in somber and often emotional death penalty discussions that touched on morality, personal faith, deterrence, discrimination against defendants of color and wrongful convictions.

Democratic Rep. Jovan Melton said all of Colorado's condemned men are from his suburban Denver district, are African-American and that blacks account for just 4 percent of Colorado's 5 million residents.

"They're African-American, they're males, my age. That's not justice," Melton said. "That is the last remnant of Jim Crow there is in Colorado." He added that he wasn't absolving them of their crimes.

But Republican and some Democratic opponents insisted that the threat of facing the death penalty has compelled countless defendants to seek plea deals to solve or close cases. They also urged their colleagues to refer the issue to voters in a referendum.

"I want to apologize to you all," GOP Rep. Shane Sandridge said, addressing crime victims' surviving loved ones. "I want to apologize to the jurors that have suffered through these cases and then watch people try to override your will."

Republican House Minority Leader Patrick Neville said Colorado "must have capital punishment in its arsenal of justice or justice will not be done, We're saying the life of the killer means more than the life of the victim."

Several Western states have moved to abolish capital punishment or put it on hold in recent years,and no inmates have been executed in any state west of Texas in the past five years, according to the Death Penalty Information Center in Washington, D.C.

Wyoming's conservative Legislature came close last year, and another initiative there this year had 26 Republican sponsors out of the 78 Wyoming GOP state lawmakers serving in its 100-member Legislature.

And Washington state lawmakers are trying to remove the death penalty from state law with a measure that seeks to make permanent a 2018 state Supreme Court ruling that struck down capital punishment as arbitrary and racially biased.

In 2019, New Mexico's Supreme Court set aside the death penalty for the final two inmates awaiting execution after the state's 2009 repeal of capital punishment.

New Hampshire was the last state to repeal the death penalty, doing so last year.

Two prominent Colorado Democrats – Sen. Rhonda Fields of Aurora and Rep. Tom Sullivan of Centennial – used their own personal stories as crime victims in a bid to maintain capital punishment, or at least refer the issue to voters in a referendum.

Robert Ray and Sir Mario Owens were sentenced to die for the 2005 ambush slayings of Field's son, Javad Marshall-Fields, and his fiancee, Vivian Wolfe.

Sullivan's son, Alex, was killed in the 2012 Aurora movie theater shootings. Shooter James Holmes received multiple life sentences after a jury couldn't agree unanimously on death.

Also on Colorado's death row is Nathan Dunlap, who ambushed and murdered four people inside a Chuck E. Cheese restaurant in 1993.

In 2013, then-Gov. John Hickenlooper, now a Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, indefinitely delayed Dunlap's execution. Hickenlooper has since come out saying he opposes the death penalty.

State Rep. Tom Sullivan, D-Aurora, who lost his son Alex in the 2012 movie theatre massacre in Aurora, Colo., speaks during a roundtable discussion in 2019 about the issues of gun control and the need for additional mental health measures with several survivors of mass shooting victims at an office in downtown Denver. Sullivan is opposing a death penalty repeal bill before Colorado lawmakers on Wednesday.

Gunman kills 5 at Milwaukee brewery before taking own life

By CARRIE ANTLFINGER and GRETCHEN EHLKE
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — An employee opened fire Wednesday at one of the nation's largest breweries in Milwaukee, killing five fellow workers before taking his own life, police said.

The assailant who attacked the Molson Coors complex was identified as a 51-year-old Milwaukee man who died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, police said.

"There were five individuals who went to work today, just like everybody goes to work, and they thought they were going to go to work, finish their day and return to their families. They didn't – and tragically they never will," Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett said.

Authorities offered no immediate motive for the attack and did not release details about the shooter or how the shooting unfolded.

None of the victims was identified. Police said they were still contacting relatives as of early evening. No one was wounded beyond those who were killed, authorities said.

Officers were working to clear the more than 20 buildings in the complex where more than 1,000 people work. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said authorities believe the shooter operated alone and that the threat was over.

President Donald Trump addressed the shooting before speaking at the White House about steps his administration is taking to combat the coronavirus.

"Our hearts break for them and their loved ones," the president said. "We send our condolences. We'll be with them, and it's a terrible thing, a terrible thing."

The attack occurred at a sprawling complex that includes a mix of corporate offices and brewing facilities. The complex is widely known in the Milwaukee area as "Miller Valley," a reference to the Miller Brewing Co. that is now part of Molson Coors.

Molson Coors CEO Gavin Hattersley called the shooter "an active brewery employee."

"Unfortunately, I am devastated to share that we lost five other members of our family in this tragic incident," he said in an email sent to employees. "There are no words to express the deep sadness many of us are feeling right now."

He said the office would be closed the rest of the week and the brewery shuttered "for the time being" to give people time to cope.

A group of brewery employees gathered at a nearby bar to talk about what had happened.

"We are all a family. We work a lot of hours together, so we're all very sad," said Selena Curka, a brewery employee who was about to start her shift when the complex went on lockdown and she was turned away.

"It's just weird, because nine times out of 10 you're going to know the shooter," said another employee Thomas Milner. "It's a tight-knit family. Within the brewery we all interact with each other."

Milner was also on his way to work when the shooting happened, and he was turned away too.

James Boyles told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel that his wife, Lasonya Ragdales, works at Molson Coors in the claims department. She was texting from inside the facility and told her husband that there was an active shooter and she was locked in a room with a bunch of co-workers, the Journal Sentinel reported.

Before Wednesday's shooting, there had been three mass killings nationwide in 2020, with 12 total victims. All have been shootings. In 2019, there were 44 mass killings, with 224 total victims. The Associated Press/ USA TODAY/Northeastern University Mass Killings database tracks all U.S. homicides since 2006 involving four or more people killed over 24 hours regardless of weapon, location, victim-offender relationship or motive.

Why aren't Dems issuing Sanders alert?

Jonah Goldberg

In "Jaws 2," Roy Scheider reprises his role as Police Chief Brody, the landlubber lawman forced to battle a great white shark. He's convinced there's another beast out there, but he can't persuade anyone who matters. "Look at this. That's a shark," says Brody, waving a grainy underwater photo at the town's political leaders. "I'm telling you and I'm telling everyone at this table, that's a shark. And I know what a shark looks like because I've seen one up close. And you better do something about this one, because I don't intend to go through that hell again."

That's how some of us on the right feel watching Sen. Bernie Sanders' rise through the primaries. A rabble-rouser with at most a transactional relationship to the Democratic Party is sweeping through the early contests by pandering to populist discontent. He's toxic to the suburban moderates who tend to tip one party or the other toward a majority. (The candidates who won enough swing districts to flip the House of Representatives in 2018 were almost entirely from this column, not Sandernistas.)

The Democratic presidential field suffers from a similar problem to the one that crippled the GOP in 2016 and saddled us with Donald Trump. It's in all the candidates' interest to see Sanders destroyed, but it's in no one's individual interest to play the role of destroyer. So Elizabeth Warren spends her time attacking Michael Bloomberg, Pete Buttigieg focuses his rhetorical artillery on Amy Klobuchar, and Klobuchar returns fire. Even Bloomberg seems too scared to nuke Sanders from orbit.

When Trump launched his hostile takeover of the GOP, there was ammo of almost every kind to fire at him. He was a lifelong Democrat who'd been pro-abortion rights and pro-gun control. He didn't have even a rudimentary understanding of the issues a president has to deal with, domestic or foreign. The stories about his personal shortcomings – affairs, bankruptcies, sexual improprieties, etc. – were an opposition researcher's dream. Conservatives had decades of experience arguing on this turf, and they still failed to stop him. So intense was the populist ire against "the establishment," Trump could claim every attack was proof that the old guard was scared of him.

Sanders is playing that same card effectively with his base, but he has other advantages as well. First, he may be quirky, but there's comparatively little personal baggage to dredge up. Also, he may be a left-wing ideologue, but he's a sophisticated and experienced one who sounds like he knows what he's talking about.

Even more problematic, Democrats have no institutional memory when it comes to arguing with socialists. It's been 73 years since the centrist liberals of Americans for Democratic Action waged their war against communists inside the Democratic Party in 1947. Those arguments were against the backdrop of the Cold War. Sanders descends ideologically from the losers in that battle, but none of the descendants of the winners seem to know how to make the right arguments anymore.

Instead, they've slowly come around to Sanders' point of view, both on policy and politics. They've mostly bought into single-payer health care being the ideal goal, even if some counsel pragmatism in achieving it. Democrats have also become besotted with the "coalition of the ascendant" – young people, minorities and immigrants who will demographically and righteously overpower the old guard. If the anointed masses say they like socialism, who are Democrats to tell them they're wrong?

In 2016, the head of the Democratic National Committee, Debbie Wasserman Schultz, was asked countless times to explain the difference between socialists and liberals or Democrats, and she either dodged or failed every time. Buttigieg said this week, "I respect my friend Sen. Sanders. I believe the ideals he talks about are ideals we all share."

This isn't exactly drawing a bright line.

Like Brody in "Jaws II," James Carville, the Democratic guru who managed Bill Clinton's successful campaign in 1992, has tried to sound the alarm. But unlike Brody's warning, Carville's sounds awfully anemic.

"If you want to vote for Bernie Sanders because you feel good about his program, you don't like the banks on Wall Street or you don't like pharmaceuticals, that's legitimate, I understand that," Carville recently said on MSNBC. "If you're voting for him because you think he'll win the election, politically, you're a fool."

Carville may be right politically, and that will matter to some of the voters who care most about giving Trump the boot. But as Sanders racks up wins, the electability argument loses its oomph, just as it did in 2016 with Trump. And, soon, attacks on the clear front-runner with the most votes will be denounced by those who insist the party unify around the people's choice, again.

Sanders' worship of dictators

Ben Shapiro

This week, Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., the socialist Democratic presidential front-runner, made waves when he merely reiterated his lifelong warmth toward the viciously evil Cuban communist regime. Brushing off the human rights violations of Fidel Castro – a man whose revolution ended with the murder or imprisonment of tens of thousands of his countrymen, and decades of impoverishment and repression for millions – Sanders explained: "We're very opposed to the authoritarian nature of Cuba, but you know, it's unfair to simply say everything is bad. ... When Fidel Castro came into office, you know what he did? He had a massive literacy program. Is that a bad thing, even though Fidel Castro did it?"

But, of course, Sanders hasn't merely praised Castro's literacy programs (which, by the way, were propagandistic exploits. Cuba had an 80 percent literacy rate before Castro's coup). Back in the 1980s, Sanders explained that he was "physically nauseated" by former President John F. Kennedy's "hatred for the Cuban revolution." In 1989, Sanders stated after visiting Cuba: "I did not see a hungry child. I did not see any homeless people." He said that the Cuban people "had an almost religious affection" for Castro.

As it turns out, there is hardly a single communist regime of the past half-century for which Sanders has not expressed some level of moral support.

This week, Sanders went out of his way to praise China, explaining: "It's is an authoritarian country. ... But can anyone deny – I mean, the facts are clear – that they have taken more people out of extreme poverty than any country in history?" Naturally, Sanders neglects to mention that China's embrace of free trade and profit margin in the 1990s was responsible for that rise from poverty. That would cut against his socialist worldview.

Then there's the Nicaraguan communist regime of Daniel Ortega, which murdered thousands. Sanders celebrated the Sandinista revolution in the 1980s (he attended a rally at which protesters chanted, "the Yankee will die"), visited Nicaragua and returned to tut-tut Ortega's human rights abuses by citing Abraham Lincoln's suspension of habeas corpus. It's no wonder Ortega has endorsed Sanders for the presidency.

Or how about the Venezuelan regime? Sanders refused to call socialist dictator Nicolas Maduro a dictator as late as last year, and refused to call opposition Juan Guaido the legitimate leader of the country. The Sanders Senate website carried an editorial for years that favorably compared the regime of Hugo Chavez with the poverty record of the United States.

And, of course, there's Sanders' long record of propagandizing on behalf of the Soviet regime. Not only did Sanders visit the Soviet Union for a honeymoon/business trip with his new wife in 1988; he returned and declared that Moscow had "the most effective mass transit system" he had ever seen. He then celebrated that the Soviets were moving "forward into some of the early visions of their revolution, what their revolution was about in 1917."

Sanders isn't a European social democrat, warm toward Denmark and Norway. He's a lifelong communist – a man who declared himself fully on board with the nationalization of nearly every major American industry in the 1970s – and an advocate for anti-Americanism abroad. The fact that it has taken until the verge of his nomination as the 2020 Democratic presidential nominee for members of the media and fellow Democrats to take note of this rather important truth demonstrates that the left's gatekeeping function has been irrevocably broken.

Act like a pilot behind the wheel

Editor,

The story which really caught my eye in a recent Weekend Edition was the front page news concerning accidents vs. crashes in regard to motor vehicles. Distracted driving has become a national issue as well it should be, considering the thousands of lives lost each year due to this preventable practice.

As an aviation enthusiast for decades it makes sense to me that the rules of flying could easily be adapted to the rules of the road. Pilots learn early on in their training to observe the following: "aviate, navigate, communicate." The pilot's job is to fly the airplane. The driver's job is to drive the vehicle. Both are expected to do this safely.

Secondly, the pilot must know where he is and where he is going at all times. A driver also needs a defined route or plan to get him where he wants to go. The captain of the aircraft is no different than the driver behind the wheel. Both are responsible not only for their own lives but also for the lives of all others on board. Pilots observe a "sterile cockpit rule," which is an FAA regulation forbidding any non-essential actions in the cockpit like idle chatter or anything else which could easily cause them to be distracted.

The NTSB reports that more than half of the airline crashes in this country are due to pilot error. If people applied this rule to their driving, crashes caused by distracted drivers could be greatly eliminated. Reaching over to grab a cellphone, looking in the back seat to check on your dog, putting on your makeup, reading a GPS unit, or having an argument with your spouse are all non-essential actions which can lead to disaster.

Lastly, communication is the least important rule in flying. Although it is necessary for pilots to maintain contact with air traffic control, it is not necessary to keep passengers constantly informed. I am always amused when the cable news channels have interviews with passengers who just endured an emergency landing, escaping with their lives, and these people complain that not a word was spoken by the captain. There's a good reason for that and it is because the pilot was too busy performing Rule No. 1 – fly the airplane!

In concluding, I will reference one of my favorite aviation phrases: "Takeoffs are optional. Landings are mandatory."

Vote Democratic – in the primary and in November

Editor,

The presidential season is upon us, and on March 10, Michigan voters will have the chance to set another record for voter turnout. In 2016, more than 2.5 million people, or just over 34 percent of registered voters, cast ballots in the presidential primary, the highest turnout since 1972. Voters who want to participate in selecting the Democrat who will defeat Donald Trump must help make this a record voter turn-out.

Primary campaigns are important because they give voters the opportunity to learn about the candidates and to participate in a vigorous exchange of ideas. The 2020 Democratic candidates have offered a wide variety of ideas on issues from health care to immigration to the environment. They have discussed ways to address the growing racial and class disparities in our country and how to make higher education affordable for everyone. Primaries inspire voter participation as people learn and choose their favorites, and this year's field of Democratic candidates provides plenty to inspire and challenge us.

Vote for the Democratic candidate of your choice on March 10. Then move on to support the Democratic party nominee in the November election, whoever she or he is.

From bad to worse

Editor,

On Nov. 14, 2016, this newspaper published my letter commenting on the results of the last presidential election.

To quote from that letter: "I did not vote for Donald Trump, as his campaign rhetoric was almost completely devoid of policy specifics, and I certainly did not appreciate the bigoted and misogynistic tones that were woven into the rallies I observed."

I closed with this tag: "At this point, I am quite skeptical as to Trump's ability to ever unite this country into a significant supportive majority. Until that changes, I will remain a member of the loyal opposition."

Since that letter, things have gone from bad to worse! The president was impeached for abuse of power. He has totally ignored the constitutional mandate for checks and balances between the executive and legislative branches, impinged on the effectiveness of America's intelligence apparatus, redefined the Department of Justice as an instrument for his own personal whims, and refuses to support legislative efforts to protect our election system against tampering by foreign entities.

A large majority of congressional Republicans continue to cast a blind eye to the destruction of our democracy, claiming fear of Trump's retribution. I don't doubt that they are motivated in part by fear of Trump, but I also think most of those who continue to support his march to authoritarianism welcome it because it is the easiest way for them to hold on to political power, at the expense of our democracy.

This must end with the 2020 election. Trump and his elected cronies must be tossed from office so we can begin to rebuild the institutions that have become tarnished by this sorry excuse for a president.

Christians haven't sold their souls to Trump

Editor,

I'm writing in regard to two letters to the editor on Feb. 3. The first one is "Evangelicals have sold their souls to Trump" by Anthony Marsala. Usually I ignore such ignorance, but to Christians who would read and believe, I have to say something. This is one of the worst cases of "Trump derangement syndrome" I have seen. Real Christians are for his policies, not the man. Freedom of religion, prayer in schools, fair trade, stopping the murder of our most helpless and innocent citizens, protecting us from terrorists, etc. Trump was acquitted because he was innocent. There was no evidence found by the House of Representatives to convict him of any crime. People, don't be brainwashed by crying temper tantrums. God bless President Trump and the United States of America. One nation under God. May freedom ring.

To address the second letter, "Change your thermostat to fight climate change" by Robert Jackson, there has always been climate change, ever since the flood. Were the "ice age" and the "dust bowl" caused by carbon footprints? No! There are some things we can do to help clean up our planet. Plastics can be made from hemp, which is biodegradable. That would help a lot. China and India and others are the most offensive. Get them cleaned up as much as America, and the planet would be much cleaner. But no matter what is done, man cannot stop climate change. It always has been and it always will be.

English woman wins annual pancake race in Kansas

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP) — An Englishwoman barely squeaked out a victory over a competitor across the pond in Kansas in Tuesday's annual pancake race between their British and American hometowns.

Katie Godor, from Olney, in Buckinghamshire, ran the 71st International Pancake Day race with a time of 1:06 seconds. That just beat the time of Whitney Hay, a student at Seward County Community College, who won the Liberal, Kansas, leg of the race in 1.09 seconds.

Women in the event must run a 415-yard race while carrying a pancake in a frying pan and flipping it at the beginning and end.

The race began in Olney in the 15th century. Liberal challenged Olney to an international competition in 1950.

The event expanded this year in Liberal to a four-day event, that includes pancake eating and flipping contests, a parade and a carnival. Other events include a 5K fun run, races for all ages, and a shriving service, which is the religious component of the holiday, according to race organizers.

Clive Cussler, million-selling adventure writer, dies at 88

By HILLEL ITALIE
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — Clive Cussler, the million-selling adventure writer and real-life thrill-seeker who wove personal details and spectacular fantasies into his page-turning novels about underwater explorer Dirk Pitt, has died, his publisher said Wednesday.

Cussler died Monday at his home in Scottsdale, Arizona, said Alexis Welby, spokeswoman for publisher Penguin Random House. He was 88. The cause was not disclosed.

Cussler dispatched Pitt and pal Al Giordino on exotic missions highlighted by shipwrecks, treachery, espionage and beautiful women, in popular works including "Cyclops," "Night Probe!" and his commercial breakthrough, "Raise the Titanic!"

Cussler was an Illinois native who was raised in Southern California and lived in Arizona for most of his final years, but he sent Pitt around the globe in plots that ranged from the bold to the incredible. "The Treasure" features an aspiring Aztec despot who murders an American envoy, the hijacking of a plane carrying the United Nations secretary-general and soldiers from ancient Rome looting the Library of Alexandria. In "Iceberg," the presidents of French Guiana and the Dominican Republic are the ones in danger, during a visit to Disneyland. In "Sahara," a race across the desert somehow leads to new information about the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

"Again and again, Dirk Pitt, working for the fictional National Underwater and Marine Agency, must find a sunken vessel and retrieve some artifact," Mark Schone, summarizing Cussler's novels, wrote in The New York Times in 2004. "Evil forces, be they Commies or Blofeldian madmen, try to stop him. Along the way Pitt saves himself, the world and the damsel of the moment."

Cussler has a new novel, "Journey of the Pharaohs," set to be released March 10, with several more awaiting posthumous publication.

In real life, Cussler founded his own National Underwater and Marine Agency and participated in dozens of searches for old ships, including one that turned up a steamship belonging to Cornelius Vanderbilt. He also had a long history of questionable claims – some admitted, some denied.

"He can definitely spin the tall tales and is a master of fiction. But that doesn't mean I buy into his alleged discovery claims," Dr. E. Lee Spence wrote on his blog in 2011. Spence, a prominent underwater archaeologist feuded with Cussler over which of them recovered a Confederate submarine.

Born an only child in 1931 in Aurora, Illinois, and raised in Alhambra, California, Cussler's name and writing persona have the air of a pseudonym, but he was born with his moniker, named for the British actor Clive Brook.

He studied for two years at Pasadena City College before enlisting in the Air Force and serving as a mechanic and flight engineer during the Korean War.

In 1955, he married Barbara Knight, with whom he had three children.

Through much of the 1960s, he worked in advertising, as a copywriter and creative director. Among the better known slogans he helped coin – "It's stronger than dirt," for an Ajax laundry detergent campaign.

OBITUARIES

Betty Mashke

Aug. 7, 1928 – Feb. 10, 2020

Betty was born in Benton Harbor on Aug. 7, 1928. She became a child of God through Holy Baptism on Aug. 28, 1928, at St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Benton Harbor. She is the child of William Henry Wetzel and Julia (Cerecke) Wetzel. Betty was 6 years old when her father died in 1934. Her mother lived to be 93 years of age and died on Jan. 4, 1989.

Betty attended St. Matthew's Christian School and was confirmed in her faith on March 29, 1942. Betty attended Benton Harbor High School, graduating with honors on May 29, 1946. She was a member of the Jane Adams chapter of the National Honor Society in both her junior and senior years, despite a severe hearing loss.

On Nov. 29, 1947, Betty was married to William Louis Mashke at St. Matthew's by the Rev. H.C. Haase. Bill and Betty had three children: Virginia (Richard) Slattery, Oshkosh, Wis., William (LuAnn) Mashke, St. Joseph, and Joel (Marla) Mashke, Eau Claire. They survive her along with seven grandchildren: Jill (Mark) McGovern, Neenah, Wis., Jeremiah (Jill Bradley) Slattery, Apple Valley, Minn., Jacob (Jennifer) Slattery, Oshkosh, Phillip Mashke, North America, Julianne (Matthew) Mast, St. Joseph, Bethany (Justin) Steffl, Sleepy Eye, Minn., and Daniel (Allyson) Mashke, Bridgman; and nine great-grandchildren: Jack and Callie Slattery; Owen, Emmitt and Alex Slattery; Hazel Mast; Lauren Steffl; and Payson and Koyer Mashke.

Betty was an active member of her church family and served her Lord in many capacities, including as the church secretary at St. Matthew's from 1962-69 and as the chairperson for the June 1969 national convention of the Lutheran Women's Missionary Society that was held there. She also served as president of the Southwest Michigan Lutheran Women's Missionary Society from 1970-71. For many years Betty was the Southwest Michigan contact person for the Central African Medical Mission of the WELS. In 1970, Betty and her husband traveled to Zambia and Malawi to see first-hand the work being done by the medical missions.

As a child, Betty loved the Blossomtime parade and the Friday night Fun Parade and was inspired to be an involved citizen of the Twin Cities community. On Jan. 1, 1970, she became a partner in purchasing a small Hallmark card shop, located in the Fairplain Plaza, known as the Hall of Cards and Books. The business grew quickly, and a second and third location were added on State Street in St. Joseph and in the Orchards Mall. Betty served as president of the Fairplain Plaza Merchants association in the early 1970s and late '80s. She was also elected to the St. Joseph Today Advisory Board, where she served for eight years. When the city fathers of St. Joseph decided on the revitalization of downtown St. Joseph, through an agreement with the state of Michigan for a Downton Development Authority, Betty was very involved.

Besides her parents, Betty was preceded in death by her husband, William L. Mashke; a brother, Clarence Wetzel; and a sister, Donna Payne. She leaves one sister, Arlene Barchett of Watervliet.

Betty would like to be remembered as a friend of mission work around the world. Memorials may be made to the Central African Medical Mission of the WELS, the Michigan Lutheran High School music department, or Caring Circle Hospice. A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 29, at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 1965 Broadway, Benton Harbor. Dinner will follow in the church's social hall. Visitation will be held before the service from 9:30-11 a.m.

The journey is finished. Salvation is the gift. This is a true saying, Amen.

Jan. 16, 1933 – Feb. 24, 2020

Patricia Mae Wolff, 87, of St. Joseph passed away Monday, Feb. 24, 2020, at Hanson Hospice Center in Stevensville.

A Celebration of Life Service will be held 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 29, at Starks & Menchinger Chapel, 2650 Niles Road, St. Joseph, with the Rev. Robert Confer officiating. Burial will follow in Riverview Cemetery, St. Joseph. Friends may visit with the family from 5-8 p.m. Friday at the funeral home. Memorial donations in Patty's name may be made to Special Olympics Area 17 – Berrien County Chapter. Those wishing to sign Patty's memory book online may do so at www.starks-menchinger.com.

Patty was born Jan. 16, 1933, in Decatur, to George and Jenny (Vliek) Sikkema. On April 21, 1951, she married Keith Wolff, whom she had known since the second grade, in Decatur. Patty devoted her time to raising and caring for her husband and five children, and later her grandchildren. She cherished the time they spent together for holidays, birthdays, other special occasions and just in general. In her free time, she enjoyed reading and knitting.

Patty is survived by her five children: Kathleen Soper of Mishawaka, Ind., Kristi (Al) Buursma of Stevensville, Scott (Gina) Wolff of Cherry Log, Ga., Eric (Robbin) Wolff of Stevensville and Curtis (Brenda) Wolff of St. Joseph; 13 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren (with one on the way); siblings: Douglas (Marcia) Sikkema of Decatur and Joyce (George) Barkovich of Paw Paw; and in-laws, Dale (Flo) Wolff of Coloma, Bruce (Dee) Wolff and Judy (Tom) Masten of North Carolina.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Keith, on Dec. 24, 2011; her parents; and siblings, Beverly Sikkema, Elwood "Woody" Sikkema and Sandra Sikkema.

Satellite almost on empty gets new life after space docking

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

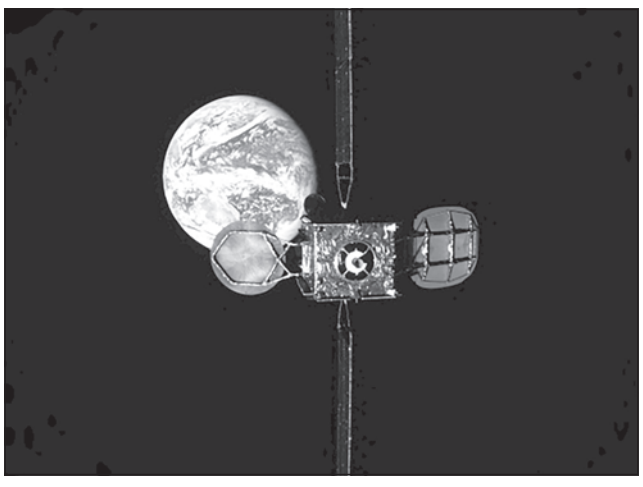
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A communication satellite almost out of fuel has gotten a new life after the first space docking of its kind.

Northrop Grumman and Intelsat announced the successful link-up nearly 22,500 miles above Earth on Wednesday. It's the first time two commercial satellites have joined in orbit like this.

The recently launched satellite – Northrop Grumman's Mission Extension Vehicle, or MEV-1 – will serve as a guide dog of sorts for its aging Intelsat companion.

Company officials called it a historic moment for space commerce, akin to the three-spacewalker capture of a wayward Intelsat satellite 28 years ago.

"We're pushing the boundaries of what many thought would be impossible," said Tom Wilson, president of SpaceLogistics, a subsidiary of Northrop Grumman. "The impossible is now a reality. Today is a great example of that."



Northrop Grumman via AP

The Intelsat 901 satellite as the Mission Extension Vehicle-1 approaches it in orbit around the Earth, background shown on Tuesday. The Northrop Grumman MEV-1 will serve as a guide dog of sorts for its aging Intelsat companion which is almost out of fuel.

The Northrup Grumman satellite was launched from Kazakhstan in October. On Tuesday, it closed in on the 19-year-old Intelsat 901 satellite and clamped onto it.

The duo will remain attached for the next five years.

This novel rescue was carried out at a slightly higher orbit to avoid jeopardizing other satellites if something had gone wrong. The Intelsat satellite was never designed for this kind of docking; officials said everything went well.

Once maneuvered back down into its operational orbit, the Intelsat satellite should resume operations in another month or two. MEV-1 will move on to another satellite in need once its five-year hitch is over.

Jean-Luc Froeliger, a vice president for Intelsat, said the satellite had just months of fuel remaining. It ended service late last year and was sent into the slightly higher orbit for the docking.

Officials declined to say how much the operation cost or what future rescues might cost. Intelsat CEO Stephen Spengler said "there was a solid business case" for undertaking the salvage attempt with five more years of operation ahead for the satellite.

It's reminiscent of another Intelsat rescue that unfolded closer to home.

Spacewalking astronauts captured the wayward Intelsat 603 satellite during Endeavour's maiden voyage in 1992.

It took three men to grab the satellite with their gloved hands in perhaps the most dramatic shuttle mission of all time. An attached rocket motor ended up propelling the satellite from a low altitude to its proper orbit.

Northrop Grumman envisions satellite refueling and other robotic repairs in another five to 10 years. In the meantime, a second rescue satellite will be launched later this year.

A Coast Guard Auxiliary is in the process of being organized in the Twin Cities. Thirty persons representing ownership in 25 boats have signed on for membership in the civilian wing of the Coast Guard. The Auxiliary assists the Coast Guard in promoting water safety. Basic qualifying tests will begin on March 3 at the St. Joseph Coast Guard station and additional members may enlist then. The local unit expects to receive their charter from the western Michigan auxiliary division in April.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Feb. 27, the 58th day of 2020. There are 308 days left in the year.

Highlight in history:

On Feb. 27, 1922, the Supreme Court, in Leser v. Garnett, unanimously upheld the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, which guaranteed the right of women to vote.

On this date:

In 1801, the District of Columbia was placed under the jurisdiction of Congress.

In 1814, Ludwig van Beethoven's Symphony No. 8 in F major, Op. 93, was first performed in Vienna.

In 1933, Germany's parliament building, the Reichstag, was gutted by fire; Chancellor Adolf Hitler, blaming the Communists, used the fire to justify suspending civil liberties.

In 1939, the Supreme Court, in National Labor Relations Board v. Fansteel Metallurgical Corp., effectively outlawed sit-down strikes.

In 1943, during World War II, Norwegian commandos launched a successful raid to sabotage a German-operated heavy water plant in Norway. An explosion inside a coal mine near Bearcreek, Montana, killed 74 miners and one rescue worker. The U.S. government, responding to a copper shortage, began circulating one-cent coins made of steel plated with zinc (the steel pennies proved unpopular, since they were easily mistaken for dimes).

In 1951, the 22nd Amendment to the Constitution, limiting a president to two terms of office, was ratified.

Trump says U.S. 'very ready' for virus; Pence to lead response

By LAURAN NEERGAARD and RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump declared Wednesday that the U.S. is "very, very ready" for whatever the coronavirus threat brings, and he put his vice president in charge of overseeing the nation's response.

Trump sought to minimize fears of the virus spreading widely across the U.S., saying, "I don't think it's inevitable."

But standing next to him at a White House news conference were health authorities who reiterated that Americans need to get ready for what could become a wider outbreak requiring such steps as school closures.

"Our aggressive containment strategy here in the United States has been working and is responsible for the low levels of cases we have so far. However, we do expect more cases," said Dr. Anne Schuchat of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

More than 81,000 cases of COVID-19, an illness characterized by fever and coughing and sometimes shortness of breath or pneumonia, have occurred since the new virus emerged in China.

The National Institutes of Health's top infectious disease chief cautioned a vaccine won't be ready for widespread use for a year or more – but said the virus might return, so researchers have to push ahead.

NIH's Dr. Anthony Fauci called it "quite conceivable" that the virus will "come back and recycle next year. In that case, we hope to have a vaccine."

Trump said Vice President Mike Pence will be working with CDC, NIH and other government agencies to coordinate the response. In previous outbreaks, the White House has appointed a "czar" to pull together the different departments' work.

"We're very, very ready for this, for anything," even if it's "a breakout of larger proportions," Trump told a news conference.

The U.S. announced a 15th case of coronavirus Wednesday, bringing the total number of infected people in the country to 60. No details were released immediately on the newest case. But the higher count includes people who traveled back from outbreak areas in Asia: three who were evacuated from the central China city of Wuhan and 42 Americans who were evacuated from the Diamond Princess cruise ship docked in Japan.

President Donald Trump, with members of the President's Coronavirus Task Force, holds a paper about countries best and least prepared to deal with a pandemic, during a news conference in the Brady Press Briefing Room of the White House, Wednesday, in Washington.

On Capitol Hill, senior lawmakers called for a bipartisan spending package that would give federal, state and local officials more resources. Trump had requested $2.5 billion to fight the virus; Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer of New York countered with an $8.5 billion proposal.

Trump told reporters he was open to spending "whatever's appropriate."

Republican and Democratic lawmakers alike have questioned whether Trump's original request is sufficient.

House Appropriations chairwoman Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., said it's premature to put a price tag on the package. "We're working on it and we'll have a number but I'm not sure it's going to be the number that Schumer's proposing," said Lowey, adding that she's working with lawmakers of both parties.

Aides said the House measure is likely to be unveiled next week. Bipartisan "four corner" meetings – Democrats and Republicans in both the House and Senate – began Wednesday, a House Democratic aide said, with a bipartisan bill the goal.

Schumer has been harshly critical of Trump's response to the outbreak, and his request – announced before the Democratic-controlled House Appropriations Committee has weighed in – rankled some Democrats hoping for quick, bipartisan action to address the crisis.

Arriving back in the U.S. early Wednesday, Trump immediately began to counter critics who say he should have acted sooner to bolster the federal response to the coronavirus.

Trump has wondered aloud if Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar is the right person to lead the administration's response. The White House had considered naming a virus czar, but was not sure that was the right route, said a person familiar with the discussions. Azar himself was said to be supportive of naming a czar.

Among those under consideration for such a post: Former Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Scott Gottlieb. The person spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss private deliberations.

White House press secretary Stephanie Grisham was also pushing back. Grisham retweeted a CDC post that said "there is currently no reported community spread" of coronavirus in the U.S.

This week, the NIH received a shipment of test doses of a vaccine candidate from Moderna Inc., in preparation for first-step safety testing in a few dozen people aimed to begin by April. But Fauci cautioned reporters that in a best-case scenario, "you're talking about a year to a year and a half" before any vaccine would be ready for widespread use.

Fauci said that while only a few cases have turned up in the U.S. from travelers outside the country, "we need to be able to think about how we will respond to a pandemic outbreak."

"It's very clear. If we have a global pandemic, no country is going to be without impact," Fauci said.

A pandemic involves the continual spread of sustained transmission from person to person in multiple regions and hemispheres throughout the world simultaneously, Fauci noted.

RISK

sounding the alarm bells yet, but say they're closely monitoring the situation. And while they don't want to react to volatile swings in financial markets, deepening losses in stocks could undercut consumer confidence, which in turn could cause a retrenchment in spending and push the economy into recession.

"The equity market is central to the U.S. economy," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics, noting that the large baby boom population is particularly susceptible to a market downturn because they have much of their nest egg in it.

Zandi considered the rapid spread of the virus in Italy as a major turning point, and after Tuesday's warning from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention that infections were bound to increase in the United States, he raised the odds of a global recession to 50 percent, up from just 20 percent last week.

"If it goes to a pandemic, then I think the economy is in recession," he said.

The World Health Organization hasn't yet classified the outbreak as a pandemic. As of early Wednesday, its daily tracking reported more than 81,000 confirmed cases in more than three dozen countries, with 2,700 deaths, the vast majority in China. The rate of increase in cases is now fastest outside of China.

In fact, China, where the COVID-19 virus was first detected in December, has seen a steady decline in reports of new infections in recent days. And key parts of the Chinese economy, which had been in virtual lockdown, have picked up notably as many operations have resumed.

But even as things look better in China, a surge of new cases in South Korea, Italy and Iran has sparked fears that the economic impact will only widen as other countries, and the companies that operate there, adopt similarly stringent responses to keep the virus in check, such as travel restrictions and temporary closures of factories and businesses.

Even before the virus outbreak, the global economy was smarting from President Donald Trump's trade wars, uncertainties about Brexit and rising tensions in South America and the Middle East.

Now it looks like several major economies – Japan, Germany, Italy, South Korea – could slide into a technical recession, defined as two consecutive quarters of negative output.

Fed officials seemed unruffled by the stock market declines, or that the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note fell to an all-time low Tuesday as investors fled riskier assets for the safety of U.S. government bonds.

Fed Vice Chair Richard H. Clarida, speaking at an economic conference in Washington on Tuesday afternoon, said that "it is still too soon to even speculate about either the size or the persistence of these effects, or whether they will lead to a material change in the outlook."

Clarida added that the U.S. economy and the central bank's current monetary policy were both in a "good place," essentially repeating public comments made by Fed Chair Jerome H. Powell two weeks ago.

Trump's chief economic adviser, Larry Kudlow, has insisted that even if the rest of the world tumbled into recession, the U.S. could remain an island of prosperity.

"Right here we're doing awfully well now," he said on CNBC on Tuesday as stocks were rapidly falling.

"We have contained this," he said. "I won't say airtight, but it's pretty close to airtight." As of Tuesday there were 53 confirmed cases in the U.S., with no deaths.

Trump was set to address the health crisis at a news conference Wednesday evening.

Job growth has been resilient. And the Fed's low interest rates have given a boost to the housing market and are helping household balance sheets.

At the same time, corporate debts are high, manufacturing remains in recession and business investment is sluggish. Analysts say it's possible the U.S. could skirt a recession in a global downturn, but it'll be close.

policies implemented regarding travel and meeting restrictions to safeguard employees from the uncertainty of delays as airports have ever-changing controls and help reduce exposure risks."

Whirlpool has a large presence in Milan, Italy, which is in the same region where Italy has seen the rapid spread of the coronavirus. The company opened its Whirlpool Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) headquarters in Milan, Italy in 2017. The EMEA headquarters is in the Perseo Expo District, and has more than 600 employees.

Italy has confirmed 400 cases of the virus as of Wednesday, in the northern regions of the country, which so far is the largest outbreak outside of Asia. To date 12 people have died in Italy from from the outbreak.

According to the European Center for Disease Prevention and Control, Italy has put 11 cities and towns in the country's north on lockdown – banning people from entering or leaving affected areas, suspending public events and closing attractions. The measure put an estimated 100,000 people under quarantine.

In Milan, according to an online BBC story, fear is spreading faster than the virus, with cafes empty and hotel reservation cancelations mounting. Milan, however, is not in lockdown.

According to Whirlpool's website, the company employs more than 6,000 people in eight locations in Italy.

"The health and safety of Whirlpool Corp. employees and those involved in our operations are our first priority," the company's statement read. "We have taken an array of steps, like many responsible global companies, to protect the health of our employees and gather the facts needed to minimize any impacts on our business."

Crystal Springs Cemetery still lacks its next manager

By LOUISE WREGE
HP Staff Writer

BENTON HARBOR — Members of the Benton Harbor Cemetery Board still don't know who is going to manage Crystal Springs Cemetery after the current manager leaves in less than three weeks.

At a special meeting Tuesday, Clerk Kimberly Thompson read a statement from City Manager Ellis Mitchell, saying: "There are negotiations going on. The plan for the management of the cemetery is under review and will be revealed after approval." Mitchell did not attend the meeting.

That led some members to question if the city has sent out a request for proposal (RFP) looking for a cemetery manager.

"That should have been published," said member Lisa Gorman-Burton. "People have been inquiring."

She said she knows of one person very interested in seeing a job description for managing the cemetery.

If an RFP had been sent out, Gorman-Burton said the board would know who the candidates were and could choose one.

Current manager Bert Edquist gave the city the required 120-day notice last November, saying that after March 15, he will no longer manage the city's two cemeteries – Crystal Springs and Morton Hill.

Thompson said the last time an RFP was sent out looking for a cemetery manager was in 2013, which resulted in Edquist taking over management on Oct. 1, 2013.

In the 20-year agreement with the city, which was negotiated by then-Emergency Manager Tony Saunders II, Edquist agreed to buy the existing cemetery equipment for $100,000 and to pay a one-time $25,000 management fee.

Edquist said no one from the city has talked with him about buying the cemetery equipment, which includes office equipment. He said he even owns the phones.

Unless an arrangement can be made with the city, he said he's taking the equipment with him when he leaves.

Edquist said there is an option in his contract in which he can assign the contract to someone else, with the city's approval. He said that can be done without the city having to send out RFPs. But he said no one has asked him to do that.

In addition, he said he has offered to continue doing burials at the cemetery as long as the families pay the city and the city releases him from any liability. He said he has also not received word on that offer.

Edquist said the records at Crystal Springs are a mess, and that everything he's done during his six years of management is on a computer program he bought. About a year ago, Edquist hired a person to go through the old files to put them on the computer program. But he said it's a slow process.

Because of the mess, Edquist said he received the first lawsuit in his career in the cemetery business last week. He said he buried a loved one in a space that, unknown to him, was owned by someone else. He said they moved the vault one space down, but the family is still unhappy.

He said his contract stipulates that he is not responsible for problems that result from before he became the manager, so he is hoping that the city's attorney will represent him in the case that was filed at the Berrien County Courthouse.

Edquist will attend the city's legislative committee on March 4 to give an update on the cemeteries. Board members said they will also be there and hope to get some answers.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, member Lisa Varrie was appointed as board chairperson.

Van Buren treasurer touts efforts to stave off home foreclosures

By BECKY KARK
For The Herald-Palladium

PAW PAW — If you're one of several hundred homeowners in Van Buren County who face the possibility of foreclosure this year due to unpaid property taxes, help is on the way.

The Van Buren County Treasurer's Office is offering a hardship extension program in March to give county residents who owe back taxes an opportunity to set up a monthly payment plan to avoid losing their home.

"Our No. 1 goal is preventing tax foreclosure and helping families stay in their homes," said County Treasurer Trisha Nesbitt.

Homeowners who have fallen behind on paying property taxes for a period of three years or more are subject to foreclosure in the state of Michigan. This year's hardship program is geared toward homeowners who haven't paid their 2017 taxes.

"The Hardship Extension program provides property owners with one additional year to pay off their taxes," Nesbitt explained. "Under the program, a property owner's 2017 and 2018 taxes would be due by March 31, 2021. If they are not fully caught up on their 2018 taxes by that date, property owners are welcome to reapply next year. I am happy to work with any property owners who are making a strong effort to get caught up on their back taxes."

Currently, about 400 county residents' properties are at risk of foreclosure, according to Nesbitt.

Homeowners who would like to take part in the hardship extension program can visit the treasurer's office, 219 E. Paw Paw St., from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. Nesbitt also is reaching out to people throughout the county by hosting open houses at various locations in March.

She will be at the Van Buren District Library's Covert branch from 10 a.m. to noon, Thursday, March 5, the Hartford Public Library from 11 a.m.-1 p.m., Monday, March 9, and Van Buren District Library's Bangor branch from 9-10:30 a.m., Friday, March 13.

Homeowners who are seeking assistance must enroll in the program by March 31.

"Property owners have until March 31 to pay their 2017 taxes in full or to enter into a payment plan to avoid foreclosure, which is why I'm holding mobile office hours and making myself and my staff available to help property owners who have fallen behind on their taxes," Nesbitt said.

Final Berrien session for people facing foreclosure is Saturday

By HP STAFF

BENTON TOWNSHIP — Berrien County Treasurer Bret Witkowski will hold his final payment plan session away from the county building Saturday for people who face foreclosure on their property.

He'll meet with property owners from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Benton Township Hall, 1725 Territorial Road. The treasurer has held payment plan sessions in various communities to help people save their property, through payment plans.

Witkowski urges people who are three years behind on their property taxes to take advantage of the program, which he said has a 94 percent success rate. The number of properties in a payment plan is up 16.4 percent from last year at this time, and the number of potential foreclosures is down 7.86 percent from a year ago.

By law, property owners have until March 31 to pay their 2017 and prior unpaid taxes, or enter into a payment plan or the property will be foreclosed. Witkowski said if delinquent taxes from 2017 are not paid or made subject to a payment plan by March 31, there is nothing he can to under the law to help a person keep their property.

"I hope people will take advantage of this opportunity to save their property," the treasurer said.

A list of Berrien County properties facing foreclosure has been printed in an insert in today's paper.

Vaping products would be regulated, taxed under package of bills

By KATHLEEN GRAY
Detroit Free Press

LANSING — Smokers would have to be 21 to purchase any tobacco products, including e-cigarettes, and vaping products would be taxed at a rate of 24 percent under a package of bills debated in Lansing on Tuesday.

"This is a bipartisan package that sets a framework for how we handle vaping products," said Sen. Jim Ananich, D-Flint, during a meeting of the Senate Regulatory Reform Committee. "There's not a lot of clarity out there and we want to fix that and keep these devices out of the hands of kids."

The bills come after an emergency order signed by Gov. Gretchen Whitmer last year that would ban all flavored vapes in Michigan. She was the first governor in the nation to sign such an order, but it has been challenged in court and hasn't taken effect yet. However, Juul, the largest manufacturer of vaping products, stopped selling flavored vapes, other than menthol, last year.

It came on the heels of a rash of lung injuries and deaths associated with e-cigarette use. Many of the injuries came from black market vapes containing THC, the active ingredient in marijuana, and cut with Vitamin E acetate. A 17-year-old Michigan teenager recently underwent a double lung transplant at Henry Ford Health System as a result of vaping-related injuries.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 2,807 people have been hospitalized with vaping-related lung injuries, and 68 have died, including four in Michigan.

Medical professionals said the bills were a step in the right direction, but

VAN BUREN COUNTY

Board hires architect for possible new courthouse

By ROD SMITH
HP Correspondent

PAW PAW — Van Buren County Board members on Tuesday contracted with Kalamazoo-based architectural firm DLZ Michigan to update designs and develop timelines to build a new courthouse on the south side of the present complex in downtown Paw Paw.

The rough plan is to tear down the old sheriff's quarters to make room for the new structure. The South Haven courthouse, historic courthouse and administration buildings will remain, if the plan eventually is approved.

The goal is to enhance functionality in the 120-year-old courthouse, as well as safety for the public and law enforcement personnel transporting inmates to court.

Commissioners are considering a millage request during the November election, but have made no decision. The project is projected to run roughly $21 million.

DLZ had come up with the original design for a larger project about three years ago. That consisted of a jail addition, a court building and to renovate the buildings in the courthouse square. But in 2017 voters rejected the $32 million bond request by better than two-to-one. The proposal was 0.7-mills for 20 years.

In other matters, commissioners set the county's share of the 911 surcharge to 75 cents, which is where it had been.

"Failure to collect the additional 75 cents would eliminate approximately $531,000 from the 911 budget," wrote Central Dispatch Director Tim McGee, in a memo to commissioners. "Van Buren County would not be able to sustain viable operation of 911 services without this local surcharge collection."

The 75 cents, which voters approved in 2014, is just part of the surcharge. There's a state default surcharge of $1.17 per device, making the total surcharge $1.92 per month per device. This brings in about $1.3 million.

A device is anything that can contact 911. These include cell phones and landlines. Some internet-based services have to be registered to enable 911 access.

The local amount has to be set yearly, with the local surcharge running from July 1, 2020, to June 30, 2021.

Infant injured in accident

Police say an infant from South Haven was injured early Wednesday morning after the vehicle the baby was riding in collided with another one on County Road 380 near South Haven Area Regional Airport in South Haven Township. First responders from South Haven Area Emergency Services and South Haven Police Department responded to the crash shortly after 6 a.m. Approximately 2 inches of snow had fallen on the South Haven area overnight, creating slick road conditions. Police say the crash occurred when one of the vehicles began sliding and hit the other one. The infant was taken to Bronson South Haven Hospital with minor injuries.

Whitmer call for transparency still a work in progress

By PAUL EGAN
Detroit Free Press

LANSING — Early in 2019, newly elected Gov. Gretchen Whitmer ordered state agencies to respond more quickly to requests for public records under Michigan's Freedom of Information Act, and to reduce the fees citizens are charged to receive those records.

But one year later, Whitmer's office has not been tracking the response to her executive directive, and users say not much has changed.

FOIA is used by journalists, attorneys, contractors and regular citizens to access records containing a huge range of useful public information, from how much the state is paying its park rangers, to whether a high school teacher has ever been disciplined, to when the city council plans to resurface a local street.

A year after the governor called for improvements at the state level, the Free Press found:

■ Users say 10-day extensions are still the rule, not the exception

■ It's not unusual for state agencies to take months to produce requested records

■ High fees to obtain public records remain a concern.

In a Feb. 1, 2019, speech to the Michigan Press Association in Grand Rapids, Whitmer said she wanted closer adherence to state law, which says public bodies shall respond to FOIA requests "within five business days" of receipt.

"State government must be open, transparent and accountable to taxpayers," said Whitmer, a Democrat, in announcing her plan to improve FOIA and state government transparency.

Extending the response time by 10 additional business days – an option provided for in the FOIA law – is "going to be the exception, and not the general rule," she said.

Regular users of FOIA say that has not happened. And they say the initial response time Whitmer targeted is often a red herring.

State agencies can lawfully respond within five business days by providing an estimated fee for gathering and processing the records and requesting payment of a 50 percent deposit, but after receiving the payment take much longer to produce the records.

Issues beyond whether a 10-day extension is taken "are much more significant," said Detroit attorney Ralph Simpson, who helps citizens and community groups with FOIA requests as part of his practice.

"It's the cost, whether they are now going to say they can take several months, and whether they provide a good faith response," he said.

Long delays, high fees

Earl Booth, a corrections officer at the Charles E. Egeler Reception & Guidance Center, a state prison near Jackson, has used FOIA to investigate what he sees as sometimes lax and inconsistent internal security, uneven enforcement of prison rules, and retaliatory internal affairs investigations, among other concerns.

Booth, who filed the FOIA requests on his own time and at his own expense, said in the last year he has seen an apparent abuse of the law, both in terms of response times and the fees charged.

Booth just received a set of emails he requested more than six months ago, despite setting tight limits on which public records he wanted to see and promptly paying all requested fees.

Booth requested emails sent or received by one prison employee during a six-day period last June. He further limited the request by saying he only wanted emails that contained six key words or phrases.

After requesting a 50 percent deposit for an estimated 3.5-hour job costing $111, the department told Booth it might take 60 business days to complete the request. It took just over twice that long. The department, which received final payment from Booth Feb. 6, did not send him the 110 emails until Monday, after the Free Press inquired about the delay.

Department spokesman Chris Gautz said Booth's request was handled by an inexperienced employee, who only started one month earlier.

"Of the 1,600 FOIA requests that come to the department, 80 percent are handled here in (the) central office," Gautz said. "There are two employees who process those, so when one is new and learning, it can slow it down a bit."

In March, Booth filed a series of FOIA requests for emails that resulted in requests for 50 percent deposits ranging from $14,573 to $70,187.

"I feel they tried to price me out," said Booth, who has not paid the deposits.

For the request that received the $14,573 estimate, Booth requested, for about a seven-month time period in 2018 and 2019, all emails sent and received by one employee that contained five key words or phrases.

"His request generated 1,842 emails to be searched, not including all the attachments on those emails," Gautz said. "That was more than 3 gig(abyte)s worth of data to sift through."

Gautz said the department charges a fee for fewer than 25 percent of the FOIA requests it receives.

Agencies not tracking response times

Whitmer did not direct state agencies to track improvements in their response rates, and several said they have not done so.

"Those are not stats we track at this time," said Jake Rollow, a spokesman for the Michigan Department of State.

"The FOIA office would have to manually review each file to get accurate numbers on extension data, time to respond to payments, etc.," Gautz said.

But Booth is not alone in experiencing state FOIA responses that are often slow and sometimes costly since Whitmer issued her directive.

Of 31 state government FOIA requests filed with 10 state agencies by the Free Press Lansing bureau since the directive took effect March 10, state officials took a time extension of 10 business days before responding to 25, or 81 percent of them.

The average response time from the date of the request to the date the records were produced was 25 business days, or five weeks.

For 17 of the requests, six agencies – the Corrections Department, the Department of Technology, Management and Budget, the Public Service Commission, the Michigan State Police, the Department of Transportation, and the Attorney General's Office – provided a total of 450 pages of records, at no charge, with an average turn-around of just over nine business days.

But for the 14 other requests either completed or still outstanding, the Corrections Department, the Department of State, the Michigan Lottery Bureau, the Michigan State Police, the Michigan State Housing Development Authority, the Attorney General's Office, and the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs have together charged the Free Press $1,237 so far to produce about 1,400 pages of records, with an average turn-around time, to date, of 44 business days, or about nine weeks.

After Whitmer issued her directive, "I don't recall receiving anything sooner," and "I don't think costs were any less," said Jim Malewitz, who covered the environment for Bridge Magazine from November 2017 to November 2019 and is now investigations editor for Wisconsin Watch, a nonprofit news outlet based in Madison.

"For me, it's been hard to notice any major difference," said Jonathan Oosting, who has covered state government for Bridge since last fall after previously handling the same beat for The Detroit News since 2016.,

"It's not like it's suddenly become an extremely easy experience."

Tim Fischer, transparency liaison for MDOT, said he is tracking his agency's responses toWhitmer's directive, and the numbers have improved. In the year before the directive, the agency took a 10-day extension almost 20 percent of the time, he said. In the year after the directive, that went down to about 13 percent, he said.

But Fischer did not have data on overall response times from the date the records were requested to when they were received. That's an important metric for people making FOIA requests.

In the last year, MDOT only charged fees for 22 of the 413 requests that were either partially or fully granted, Fischer said. The average fee charged was about $491.

Big variations among state departments

There is wide variation in how various state agencies respond to FOIA requests.

To illustrate that, Malewitz pointed to an experiment he conducted early in 2019, around the time Whitmer issued her directive on transparency, in which he asked each state agency to produce a log of the FOIA requests it received in the previous year, including the date, who submitted it, what they asked for, and information about response times and fees charged.

Nine agencies, including the Corrections Department, DTMB and MDOT, quickly and at no charge provided spreadsheets or logs with most or all of the requested information, according to data Malewitz compiled and provided to the Free Press.

But the Department of Natural Resources estimated it would cost $5,287 to provide the requested information, while the Attorney General's Office estimated it would cost $880 and the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs gave a $592 estimate, the records show. The Department of Civil Rights said the requested records did not exist, and the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs did not respond, Malewitz said.

Ed Golder, a spokesman for the DNR, said the agency does not keep a FOIA log and should have denied the request on that basis, rather than quoting a large fee.

Embezzlement alleged at Paw Paw Eagles Club

PAW PAW — A Mattawan woman has been accused of embezzling thousands of dollars from a fraternal organization in Paw Paw.

Susan M. Ryan, 69, was arraigned Tuesday in Seventh District Court East and charged with embezzlement of $20,000 or more from the Paw Paw Eagles Club, according to online court records. Her next day in court is scheduled for March 4, when she will attend a probable cause conference.

The embezzlement charge stems from an investigation Michigan State Police conducted in late 2019 regarding allegations of embezzlement from the Paw Paw Eagles club while Ryan served as secretary. If convicted, she could face a fine of up to $15,000, or up to three times the value of the amount embezzled (whichever is greater), up to 10 years in prison, or both.

Longjohn not running for Congress

KALAMAZOO — Former Democratic candidate for Congress Matt Longjohn announced Wednesday he will not seek the 6th Congressional District seat this year.

In a lengthy Facebook post to his candidate page, Longjohn wrote that he will not be seeking the primary win for the right to run for the seat now held by St. Joseph Republican Fred Upton.

"We gave it our best shot in 2018, and I'm proud of what we accomplished," Longjohn wrote Wednesday.

In addition to criticizing his former opponent, Longjohn refrained from endorsing any Southwest Michigan Democratic challenger for the August primary. Upton, who this week announced his intention to seek an 18th consecutive term, defeated Longjohn by 4.5 percentage points in 2018.

BILLS

didn't go far enough to keep the products away from children and teenagers and prevent them from becoming smokers at all.

"The most recent surveys show that more than 25 percent of high school students have vaped in the last 30 days. We're seeing increases of epidemic proportions over the last few years," said Dr. Sharon Swindell, a Ypsilanti pediatrician and president of the Michigan Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

"We absolutely need e-cigarette devices to fall under definition of tobacco products. They are all nicotine delivery systems and they need to be regulated in the same way."

But Juul supported the bills, saying it was a common sense legislation that would protect children while preserving the rights of adults.

"We fully support a regulatory framework that provides for adult smokers to transition away from cigarettes," said Ashlie Kuehn, a lobbyist for Juul.

Kuehn said that the 24 percent tax on the wholesale price of vaping products would put Michigan at the highest rate among surrounding states. Illinois comes closest, she said, with a 15 percent tax.

"We are supportive of being a part of the state revenue stream and we want to remain underneath the tax on traditional tobacco products," she said.

The tax on cigarettes in Michigan is $2 per pack plus the 6 percent sales tax. The average price of a pack of cigarettes in the state is $6.44, the 19th highest in the nation. A vaping device costs between $15 and $20 and a four-pack of vaping pods, which is roughly the equivalent of four packs of cigarettes, costs about $16. The 24 percent tax on the four-pack would be $3.84.

Under the bills:

■ The 24 percent tax on the wholesale price of vaping products would begin on Jan. 1, 2021. The money would go toward the state's Medicaid program, the School Aid Fund and Healthy Michigan, which is funded with taxes on cigarettes.

■ A person would be prohibited from selling vapor or other tobacco products to anyone under the age of 21. This would align with federal policy signed by President Donald Trump in December.

■ The legislation would require vape retailers to be licensed annually at a cost of $25.

■ It would prohibit vape retailers from advertising or marketing their products in a way that would attract children and teenagers.

■ It would allow vape retailers to sell any flavored vape product to anyone 21 or older.

■ It would increase the fines against vape retailers who sell vapes or other tobacco products to minors and require shop owners to install an age-verification system.

There was general agreement among the members of the committee that something needs to be done to get a handle on vaping, especially among youths. But there was discord over how to get to a final deal.

"My starting rate would be a zero percent tax," said Sen. Aric Nesbitt, R-Lawton. "I have two friends who stopped smoking because of vape products."

Ananich said the bill is a good starting point and that he expected that compromises would be hatched.

"These bills are a starting point because we cannot and should not continue with the status quo," he said. "We arrived at the 24 percent wholesale tax based on how other taxes on tobacco products are set and we wanted it to be in the ballpark of other tobacco products while not incentivizing the black market. It's sort of a middle ground."

The bills – SB 781-786 – didn't get a vote Tuesday, but will be debated again next week.

Sanctuary debate

In other matters, Hartford-area resident Jeffrey Roe again urged commissioners to support a resolution declaring Van Buren a Second Amendment sanctuary county.

He was told the question is being considered by a committee and would likely come up for discussion at the March 10 meeting, with a formal vote possible at the March 24 meeting.

Roe told commissioners the resolution isn't proposing new laws and in some ways is "highly symbolic."

He called the Second Amendment, which is about bearing arms, "vital to our freedoms," along with vital to citizen safety.

In other matters, commissioners hired Grand Valley Glass of Grand Rapids, Engineered Protection Systems of Grand Rapids, and Hall Builders of Paw Paw to add security features to the clerk's and prosecutor's offices in the historic courthouse. Total price is $94,341.

The Mini Page® CELEBRATING 50 YEARS!

Issue 08, 2020 Founded by Betty Debnam

Next Week: Creepy crawlers

Take a Leap!

Mini Fact:
In Greece, it's considered unlucky to marry during a leap year.

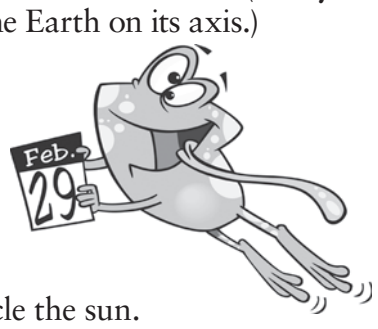
At the end of this week, people all over the world will experience a special day, one that usually comes only every four years.

This year, February will have 29 days, and 2020 will have 366 days. In most years, February has only 28 days.

How did we get this extra day?

A calendar lesson

We define a year as the number of days it takes for the Earth to orbit the sun. (A day is one rotation of the Earth on its axis.)



The problem is that the Earth doesn't orbit the sun in a round number of days. In fact, it takes 365 1/4 days for our planet to circle the sun.

If we didn't have leap days and leap years, eventually our months would shift to different seasons. For example, July might be in the springtime.

In 1582, Pope Gregory XIII introduced the Gregorian calendar. This version of the calendar helped solve the problem of the shifting days and months. This is how it works:

- Every year that can be evenly divided by 4 is a leap year, EXCEPT:
- Years that can be evenly divided by 100 (centuries) are not leap years, BUT
- Years that can be divided by 400 are leap years.

Time for some math

Whew! Let's give it a try. Put your math hat on.

This year is 2020. But what about 2021?

2020 ÷ 4 = _____

Therefore, 2020 is ☐ is not ☐ a leap year. (Check one.)

2021 ÷ 4 = _____

2021 will ☐ will not ☐ be a leap year because it is not evenly divisible by 4.

What about centuries?

We celebrated the last year of the century (100 years) and millennium (1,000 years) 20 years ago, in 2000. You may be alive when the next millennium arrives in 2100!

2100 ÷ 4 = _____
2100 ÷ 100 = _____
2100 ÷ 400 = _____

So 2100 will ☐ will not ☐ be a leap year. Why?

Leap day

What do we do with the extra day in a leap year? It is tacked on to the end of February. It becomes February 29. It's called leap day.

Leap birthdays

Do you know anyone with a leap birthday? You might think that someone born on Feb. 29, called a leapling or a leaper, would have a birthday only every four years. But most leap birthdays are celebrated on Feb. 28 or March 1 in non-leap years.

A remembering rhyme

You may already know this rhyme. There are many versions of it. The poem helps us remember the differences in the number of days in each month.

Thirty days hath September,
April, June and November;
Thirty-one the others date,
Except in February, twenty-eight;
But in leap year we assign
February, twenty-nine.

Answers:
2020 ÷ 4 = 505. 2020 is a leap year.
2021 ÷ 4 = 505.25. 2021 is not a leap year.
2100 ÷ 4 = 525
2100 ÷ 100 = 21
2100 ÷ 400 = 5.25. 2100 will not be a leap year.

Cubs' Souza aiming for regular OF role

By JOSE M. ROMERO
Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — Steven Souza Jr. played in his third spring training game Wednesday, trying to make the most of an opportunity for quality playing time in the outfield for the Chicago Cubs this season.

To make it to opening day healthy – a given for most players – would be a bigger deal for Souza, given that he hasn't been able to do so in each of the past two years.

Souza has overcome major knee surgery that cost him the entire 2019 season to be in Cubs camp and in position to earn a roster spot with the club.

"What a blessing, I feel fantastic," Souza said. "I've almost been waiting to not feel good. That probably sounds bad but I just think with how dramatic the surgery was, you just kind of are like waiting for something to be sore or even stiff."

But there is no discomfort for the moment, and Souza is running, swinging the bat and working out with nothing physical prohibiting him from doing what he enjoys the most. He's got a bounce in his step, seen in the finger-snapping dance move he did to Pharrell Williams' "Happy" song just before taking left field Wednesday at Sloan Park against the Kansas City Royals.

And Souza can focus on the business of competing for regular playing time. He's played left field and right field in spring training games, with an opening for a major role in center field.

"You can tell his timing's off a little bit. That's the hardest part to overcome, is just those live baseball reps

Tigers prospect Greene becoming hard to forget

By JEFF SEIDEL
Detroit Free Press (TNS)

LAKELAND, Fla. — Detroit Tigers manager Ron Gardenhire looked at the lineup card and noticed a problem.

Riley Greene, the Tigers' first-round draft pick, was on the bench and there were only 3½ innings left to play Tuesday afternoon against the New York Mets at Joker Marchant Stadium.

"Mac almost forgot to put him into the game," Gardenhire said laughing, teasing bench coach Lloyd McClendon. "Mac had everybody else in the game."

Gardenhire pointed at his lineup card.

"Ah, Greene," Gardenhire said.

"Oh, crap," McClendon said. (All right, that might not be his exact comment, but it's close).

So Greene was put into the game, entering as a pinch runner. He scored when Miguel Cabrera hit a home run. Greene met Cabrera at home plate – a moment that seemed thick with symbolism, one of the greatest players in history meeting the stud prospect.

"My dad texted me and he said, 'Dude, I just took a video of Miggy's homer and you high-fiving him at the plate,' " Greene said. "Awesome. I'll probably keep that video forever."

Lakeshore's Shane Williams controls Lawton's Landon VanWyk during the 140-pound championship match in the Greater Berrien County Wrestling Invitational on Feb. 1. Williams won the match 4-2.

Great grappler, great grades

Lakeshore's Shane Williams shines in wrestling, academics

By AL AREND
HP Sports Correspondent

Lakeshore senior wrestler Shane Williams excels both on the mat and in the classroom.

Williams, a two-time state placer, has a career record of 144-22, but also scored a 1500 on his SAT, including a perfect score (800) on the math portion of the test. The straight-A student also carries a weighted 4.57 grade point average, as all of his classes are advanced placement.

He has not yet decided on a college or where he wants to continue his athletic career on the mat, but has already been accepted by the University of Michigan.

"I'm waiting to hear from a number of Ivy League schools before I make a final decision on college," Williams said. "I'll hear from eight more schools in March."

Where did he get all his smarts from?

"I guess from my parents (Tony Sr. and Eileen Williams)," he noted.

Wrestling also runs in the Williams family, as his older brother, Tony, is a freshman grappler at Stanford University.

"I started wrestling in the third grade," explained Williams. "My dad was a wrestler and a two-time state runner-up in New Jersey (who went on to wrestle at Lehigh), so I was kind of raised into it."

Williams is currently 40-2 his senior year, after losing a hard-fought 4-2 decision in his 135-pound regional championship match to Chelsea's undefeated Nick Matusko (42-0).

Both are in opposite brackets at the Division 2 state finals (March 6-7) at Ford Field in Detroit.

"If they both win their first three matches at state, they'll meet again for the 135-pound state championship," noted Lakeshore coach Bruce Bittenbender.

"That's my goal to be a (individual) state champion and a team state champion," added Williams.

Lakeshore in D2, Dowagiac in D3, and Lawton in D4 have all qualified for the team state finals to be held Friday and Saturday at the Wings Event Center in Kalamazoo. The quarterfinals are Friday, with the semifinals and finals on Saturday morning and afternoon, respectively.

Williams, who placed fourth and third at individual state the previous two years, said his favorite takedown move on the mat "is a high crotch from the neutral position," adding "I'm not the strongest guy out there."

"He's obviously an intelligent wrestler, who is excellent on his feet," praised coach Bittenbender. "He's a hard worker and dedicated to the sport. He simply excels at a variety of techniques. He's not only smart, but mentally tough."

Williams has wrestled at 140 pounds most of the season, but choose to go 135 for the individual tournament.

"I was considering staying at 140 the week of districts, but after consulting with my parents and coaches, it was decided I'd go 135," explained Williams.

Honda Classic more than 'The Bear Trap'

By TIM REYNOLDS
Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — PGA National's signature test is a three-hole span on the back nine called "The Bear Trap," named for Jack Nicklaus and touted as one of the most demanding stretches in all of golf.

The par-3 15th, with water down the right side. The par-4 16th, with the approach over water. The par-3 17th, over water again with a green that's sloped toward trouble. Oh, and the wind is almost always swirling on that part of the golf course.

They're daunting on a good day, diabolical on a bad day. And to win The Honda Classic, which starts Thursday at PGA National, one needs to worry about much more than those three holes.

The Bear Trap is one thing. The rest of PGA National, that's a bear, too.

"There's no easy hole out there," defending champion Keith Mitchell said.

The numbers make that abundantly clear. PGA National ranked as the fifth-toughest course to play on the PGA Tour last season, behind tracks that played host to four of what were supposed to be among the year's toughest tournaments. The PGA Championship at Bethpage had players, on average, shooting 2.5 shots over par per round. The U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, nearly 1.4 shots over par. The World Golf Championships event in China at Sheshan International, 1.3 shots over par. And the British Open at Royal Portrush, 1.2 shots over par.

Next up? The Honda, where players were just over a full shot past par in every round last season. And that meant it was easier than in 2018, when PGA National was the second toughest on tour behind only the U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills.

"It's a hard golf course," said 2019 U.S. Open champion Gary Woodland. "I think that benefits me. Scores are never going to get too low. Obviously, it's a lot weather-depending. But it's one of the most mentally demanding golf courses I think we face all year. There's a lot of shots, especially coming down the back nine, that you just have to step up and hit shots. There's really no bailout."

Sharapova retires from tennis at age 32 with 5 Slam titles

By HOWARD FENDRICH
AP Tennis Writer

Maria Sharapova was a transcendent star in tennis from the time she was a teenager, someone whose grit and groundstrokes earned her a career Grand Slam and whose off-court success included millions of dollars more in endorsement deals than prize money.

And yet, Sharapova walked away from her sport rather quietly Wednesday at the age of 32, ending a career that featured five major championships, time at No. 1 in the WTA rankings, a 15-month doping ban and plenty of problems with her right shoulder.

There was no goodbye tournament, no last moment in the spotlight, for someone so used to garnering so much attention for so long, with or without a racket in hand.

"I've been pretty good in the past, balancing my time with my sponsors with my tennis, because I know my priority. At the end of the day, what I love doing is competing, and that's where my heart is at: on center court," Sharapova said in a 2006 interview with The Associated Press right before that year's U.S. Open.

"There are a couple of sides of me," she said then. "There's the Maria that's a tennis player. There's the Maria that is a normal girl. And there's the Maria who's a businesswoman. And that's where the 'Maria Sharapova brand' comes into play."

Around that time, she signed a "lifetime" contract with a racket company, a deal that eventually was ended. And two weeks after that, she would win the U.S. Open trophy while wearing an outfit that resembled a sparkly black cocktail dress, part of the "couple of sides" persona she cultivated.

Two years later, though, Sharapova missed the tournament at Flushing Meadows because she needed surgery on her shoulder, which has troubled her off and on ever since; she had another operation on that joint in 2019.

She lost the last four matches she played at major tournaments, with first-round exits in her past three appearances, including at the Australian Open in January. That turned out to be the last match of her career and made her 0-2 this season.

In an essay written for Vanity Fair and Vogue about her decision to retire, posted online Wednesday, Sharapova asks: "How do you leave behind the only life you've ever known?"

She disclosed that she "had a procedure to numb my shoulder to get through the match" a half-hour before walking on court for a first-round exit at last year's U.S. Open, writing: "I share this not to garner pity, but to paint my new reality: My

IN BRIEF

Muguruza advances in Qatar Open

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — Former No. 1 Garbiñe Muguruza beat Ukrainian teenager Dayana Yastremska 6-2, 6-4 Wednesday to reach the quarterfinals of the Qatar Open.

Muguruza, the former French Open and Wimbledon champion who lost in this year's Australian Open final, has reached the quarterfinals of all five tournaments she has played in 2020. She will next face current No. 1 Ash Barty, who advanced when Elena Rybakina had to withdraw from the tournament with an injury after her second-round win on Tuesday.

Third-seeded Karolina Pliskova lost 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 to Ons Jabeur, a rising talent from Tunisia who reached the Australian Open quarterfinals.

Jabeur will next face Petra Kvitova, who defeated Jelena Ostapenko 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

Fourth-seeded Belinda Bencic also advanced by beating Yulia Putintseva 6-4, 6-3.

Djokovic, Tsitsipas advance in Dubai

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Top-ranked Novak Djokovic beat German veteran Philipp Kohlschreiber 6-3, 6-1 Wednesday to reach the quarterfinals of the Dubai Championships and remain unbeaten in 2020.

Djokovic broke for a 4-2 lead in the first set and went 4-0 up in the second before wrapping up the win in 59 minutes.

The Serb is 15-0 this year, including six wins at the ATP Cup and his run to the Australian Open title.

"It was a great performance," Djokovic said. "I enjoyed the way I played, coming out with the right focus and tactics."

Djokovic will next face seventh-seeded Karen Khachanov of Russia, who beat Austrian qualifier Dennis Novak 6-3, 6-4.

Second-seeded Stefanos Tsitsipas defeated Alexander Bublik 7-6 (1), 6-4 to set up a meeting with Jan-Lennard Struff, who needed just 39 minutes to ease past Nikoloz Basilashvili 6-1, 6-0.

Third-seeded Gael Monfils of France took his winning streak to 11 matches by ousting qualifier Yasutaka Uchiyama 6-1, 6-2. Monfils is coming off victories at Rotterdam and Montpellier.

He will face fellow Frenchman Richard Gasquet, who ousted No. 8 Benoit Paire 6-4, 6-4.

Hornets' Monk suspended by NBA

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hornets guard Malik Monk has been suspended without pay for violating the terms of the NBA/NBPA anti-drug program.

The suspension begins with Wednesday night's game against the New York Knicks and will continue until he is determined to be in full compliance with the program.

The third-year reserve from Kentucky is averaging 10.3 points and 2.9 rebounds in 21 minutes per game this season. However, he had been playing much better of late, averaging 18.2 points per game in the last seven games.

The Hornets were hoping Monk would have a breakout season, but he failed to win a spot in the starting lineup.

Beating the buzzer

Gibbs scores winner with 0.1 seconds left, Notre Dame tops Boston College

By JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press

BOSTON — John Mooney scored 22 points with 12 rebounds, and T.J. Gibbs flipped in the game-winner with 0.1 seconds left to help Notre Dame beat Boston College 62-61 in an Ash Wednesday matchup of the longtime Catholic school rivals.

Notre Dame 62, Boston College 61

BC led by as many as 10 points in the first half and had the lead with 8 seconds remaining when Jay Heath made a scoop shot over Mooney from the lane – one of five lead changes in the final four minutes. But Prentiss Hubb brought the ball down, ran into a dead end at the free-throw line and then slid the ball to Gibbs, who got the shot off in time.

The Fighting Irish (18-10, 9-8 Atlantic Coast Conference) won their third straight game since losing to No. 7 Duke on Feb. 15. They also avoided a losing two games to Boston College (13-16, 7-11) in the same season for the first time ever.

Steffon Mitchell had 12 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists for BC.

The Eagles led by as many as 10 points in the first half and still held a 55-49 edge with eight minutes left before Nate Laszewski made a 3-pointer and then a layup to make it a one-point game. It was 57-54 when Mooney made one of two free throws and then, after two misses at the BC end, Hubb hit a 3-pointer to give the Irish their first lead of the half.

The Irish led 60-59 when BC's Julian Rishwain dove to the floor to grab a loose ball; he was tied up, but the possession arrow gave the ball to the Eagles and Heath gave BC the lead.

BUZZER BEATER

BC scored 10 straight points late in the first half to turn a tie game into a 37-27 lead.

The Eagles still led by 10 when they tried to inbound the ball near midcourt with 1.6 seconds left in the half. But the pass was picked off by Rex Pflueger, who took a step, hopped from behind the half-court line and banked in a basket at the buzzer to make it 41-34.

It was 45-36 when the Irish ran off seven points in a row and eventually made it a one-point game.

BIG PICTURE

Notre Dame: The Irish started 2-5 in the ACC and are now above .500 as they make a case for the NCAA tournament.

Boston College: The Eagles had lost 13 in a row to the Irish before winning 73-72 in South Bend on Dec. 7. BC was without Jairus Hamilton and lost CJ Felder to a chest injury in the first half. The Eagles are guaranteed a losing record in the ACC for a ninth straight season.

Deep WR class jockeying at NFL combine

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Pro Football Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — If your favorite NFL team doesn't have a Tyreek Hill, Julio Jones or Courtland Sutton streaking down the field, making cornerbacks cringe and constantly redefining the highlight catch, just wait.

Chances are good they'll grab one in this year's draft.

The NFL scouting combine in Indianapolis features a tantalizing wide receiver class unlike anything ever seen at the league's annual gathering of top prospects.

"You've probably heard every GM and coach talk about this wide receiver class; it is a good one," Jets GM Joe Douglas said. "Just watching them go across the stage, there is a lot of talented players and we see how much the pass game affects the National Football League. So we do feel good about this group."

Actually, teams feel great about the 2020 receivers.

Teams are more willing than ever to bypass the old wait-and-watch standby for a plug-and-play approach with bigger, faster, quicker pass-catchers coming out such as Calvin Ridley and D.J. Moore who made an immediate impact in 2018, followed by Deebo Samuel, DK Metcalf, Marquise Brown, Terry McLaurin and A.J. Brown, who wasted no time establishing their credentials last season.

"There is a lot more receivers coming into the draft because there's just a lot more receivers in college football and high school football," Rams GM Les Snead said. "A lot of teams running three, four, five wides."

It starts way before college.

"I think in today's day and age where these guys were starting 7-on-7, it's almost like AAU basketball," Packers GM Brian Gutekunst said. "The receivers are so much more advanced in terms of their fundamentals coming into college and the league than maybe they have been in the past. It's really just the NFL offense that will take time. So I think there's some guys sitting here today that I think will have a chance to make a pretty immediate impact, and I'm excited about that."

Receivers may still need to adjust to the NFL's press coverage but just as often they're the ones putting the DBs on their heels from the get-go.

"Historically, receivers have struggled a little bit with the learning curve up to the NFL. But in the last three, four or five years, we've seen a lot of guys make immediate" impacts, said Ravens general manager Eric DeCosta.

"Especially last year, if you look at the class, you'll see a bunch of guys come in right away and make big plays. We were fortunate last year with Marquise and even Miles (Boykin) to a degree made plays for us. We're excited about those two guys and we look at this year's draft class as an opportunity for us to improve at the position even more."

Every team does.

"I think it's a combination of things," Washington Redskins coach Ron Rivera said. "I think teams are starting to understand how you use players. But I also do think because the ball is being thrown so much in college football the receiver is learning to be an explosive guy.

"I also think the body types of the receivers is changing," Rivera said. "I think they're getting bigger and stronger. There's a lot more guys that are coming out that are ready to go and are dynamic players. The guys I think people are really looking for are these bigger receivers who are dynamic with the ball in their hands."

Guys such as Colorado's Laviska Shenault, Alabama's Jerry Jeudy and Henry Ruggs III, Oklahoma's CeeDee Lamb, LSU's Justin Jefferson, Arizona State's Brandon Aiyuk and Clemson's Tee Higgins.

Just to name a few.

The wide receiver group is "as deep as I've seen," NFL draft analyst Daniel Jeremiah said. "I've got 27 wide receivers with top-three round grades in this draft. And consider average 31 are taken. We had a max of 35 taken in (2015). So this is a really phenomenal group of wideouts."

There's someone for everyone this year, whether they're looking for a deep threat, a crisp route-runner, a fearless man going over the middle or even taking the direct snap like Shenault did so often at Colorado.

"Receiver, of all positions, probably comes in the Baskin Robbins 31 favors," Bills general manager Brandon Beane said. "Size, speed, length, run after catch, all sorts of variables."

This year, especially.

"I think there could be a lot of guys drafted all the way through from 1 to 7 (rounds)," Beane said. "We were talking about it the other day. There's going to be guys drafted on the third day of the draft who may come in and take a veteran's spot on a team. It's that deep."

NFL moves closer to new CBA, but deal not done yet

By DAVE CAMPBELL
AP Pro Football Writer

The NFL and its players have moved closer to a new collective bargaining agreement and the next decade of labor peace that would come with it.

If the process is at first-and-goal now, though, there's still work to be done to get into the end zone.

With a late-night vote, on the slim majority approval of the 32 team representatives, the NFL Players Association was preparing Wednesday to send the current CBA proposal to the full union membership for potential ratification.

Last week, the owners flashed their thumbs up with a majority-vote approval of the agreement that's a product of 10 months of negotiations with a 17-game regular season the most significant change.

"There will be white smoke when there is white smoke," NFLPA president Eric Winston told reporters in Indianapolis during the NFL scouting combine. "The one thing we're not doing is rushing though this thing. Every 'I' will be dotted, every 'T' will be crossed, and when that happens, that happens."

The NFLPA's 11-member executive board initially voted down the proposal last week by a slim majority, an indication of mixed feelings within the ranks that count more than 2,000 players. Though a simple majority of votes cast among the membership is the only requirement for ratification, plenty of players have spoken in opposition to the current proposal.

"We should not rush the next 10 years for today's satisfaction," Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson said Wednesday on Twitter as he declared he'd vote no and, in a familiar refrain from NFL players over the years, referenced the benefits and protections of NBA and MLB players as benchmarks for the NFLPA to aim for.

WILLIAMS

"I've never had a problem cutting weight."

Williams, who wrestled the last half of his junior season with a dislocated thumb, was the starting second baseman on Lakeshore's baseball team until surgery on that thumb curtailed his season on the diamond.

"Playing baseball in the spring gave me a break from wrestling," added Williams, who also is a member of the Michigan West wrestling club during the summer.

Whatever college Williams chooses, he hopes to become an electrical engineer.

Team state finals

Lakeshore (19-1) face Mason (23-2) in the D2 quarterfinals. The Lancers were seeded third and Mason sixth.

"It's one meet at a time now," said Bittenbender, whose squad moved six individuals on to individual state. "It's all about matchups now. It's win or go home."

Mason moved just three wrestlers on to state, but upset fifth-rated Eaton Rapids to win its team regional.

Both teams are making their 11th appearance at team state.

Dowagiac (23-9), making its third straight appearance at team state, was seeded eighth in D3 and has the unenviable task of facing top-seed Dundee (20-1), which is making its 18th straight appearance, and 27th overall.

Dundee has 11 state qualifiers, Dowagiac four.

SOUZA

when you miss a full season," Cubs manager David Ross said. "But everything's looking really smooth coming off the bat and the way he's gone about his business is really professional."

Ross knows Souza would gladly play more often, do even more. But Ross admitted he'll have to hold Souza back a little as spring training goes along, to take care of his knee.

A few years ago, Souza was a rising star with the Tampa Bay Rays. In his third and final season there, 2017, he set career highs in hits (125), home runs (30), RBIs (78) and stolen bases (16).

Then came a trade to the Arizona Diamondbacks – where he was ticketed for an everyday role in right field – and what followed were spring training injuries that cost him all or parts of the next two seasons.

In 2018, he strained his right shoulder diving for a flyball during a game, and after returning from that during the regular season, missed more time with a pectoral injury.

He made it to the second-to-last game of the exhibition season in 2019. That night at Chase Field, he rounded third on a single and as he reached home plate to score, slipped and hyperextended his left knee and tumbled over the batter's box and onto the ground.

He immediately grabbed his knee and screamed in pain.

"So close to the finish line, again," Souza said. "And then when the doctor tells you that you may never be able to straighten your leg again, doubts start to creep in your mind about whether you can make it back."

Three major knee ligaments were torn, and surgery was required. Souza's rebound season ended before it could begin, and when the Diamondbacks let him go in the offseason, his team with them was over.

"It was bad," Souza said of his time in Arizona. "Nothing against the organization, it was just the circumstances that came upon me. It was hard on me and my family, but that's behind us and shoot, we're excited. Just the enthusiasm the Cubs have brought in bringing me in here, it's been really fun."

Souza, known for his hustling style of play, got back to full workouts in the offseason in Arizona and his hometown near Seattle. On Christmas Day, he and his siblings gifted his parents a new pickup truck in appreciation for the countless hours and days of support during Souza's youth, and the joy of being back in good spirits was topped off by the Cubs signing him to a one-year deal last month.

"We've had conversations about where I'm going to play, but I'm just trying to get as may reps as I can," Souza said. "The question was asked if I can play center field, and I feel very capable going out there."

GREENE

In the bottom of the sixth, Greene earned a walk, his third in two games, which showed his discipline.

Then, in the bottom of the eighth, he created some magic for the second straight game.

He came up against Kevin Smith, the Mets' No. 11-ranked prospect, according to MLB Pipeline.

Greene swung at the first pitch. He looked as if he were swinging a tennis racket at a butterfly. It was just ugly.

"You saw my first swing, right?" he said. "It was probably the worst swing of my life."

A fan screamed: "Come on, you are a better hitter than that."

And yes, Greene heard it.

"I heard somebody sitting behind me say some stuff," he said, "and I was like, 'Oh, man, I have to do something here.' He threw me a curveball and I think I fouled it off. I said no way is he going to throw another curve. So I sat on the fastball and I hit it."

He lifted it over the right-field fence. He now has hit two home runs in two official at-bats.

More: Detroit Tigers prospect Riley Greene has been 'ridiculous' since the beginning

"So we got him in there, now he leads the team in home runs – no big deal," Gardenhire said, pausing for dramatic effect.

That's not all. Greene leads the Grapefruit League in home runs.

"Pretty fun to watch," Gardenhire said.

"This game is not possibly this easy, is it?" a reporter asked.

"When you are young, it is," he said.

Greene took a shower in the minor-league locker room because – well, he doesn't even have a locker in the Tigers' big-league locker room.

But that hardly matters to him.

"I told some of the guys, that's it, I'm done," he said, laughing. "I'm just kidding. I'm not done. Don't put that out there."

There is one important thing to remember. A year ago at this time, Greene was still in high school. He is just 19 years old.

By comparison, Cabrera is entering his 18th season.

"I'm out there with guys who are older than me, guys I watched on TV when I was, like, what, 15," he said. "It's just awesome being here. Even if I didn't play, I'd be having a great time."

There is a huge lesson here: Just get the kid in the game.

Because he's got a heck of a swing.

SHARAPOVA

body had become a distraction."

Born in Russia, and "discovered" by Martina Navratilova at an exhibition event in Moscow, Sharapova moved to Florida as a child and trained at the Nick Bollettieri Tennis Academy.

"We'll miss her, baby. She's very special," Bollettieri told the AP in an interview last year, when Sharapova returned to his academy as she worked her way back from her latest shoulder procedure. "The tour will miss her. ... Always competitive. All business."

Sharapova burst onto the tennis scene at 17 by upsetting Serena Williams to win Wimbledon in 2004. She would beat Williams again at that year's season-ending tour championship to improve to 2-1 against the American – and never won another one of their matchups, dropping the next 19 in a row.

Powerful at the baseline, and famous for a never-give-up attitude, Sharapova reached No. 1 for the first time at 18 in 2005. After adding her second major trophy at the U.S. Open the following year, she collected an Australian Open title in 2008, and then won the French Open in 2012 and 2014.

Sharapova is one of only six women in the professional era to win each major tennis title at least once. She made 10 Grand Slam finals in all, going 5-5; the last came in 2015 at the Australian Open, where she was the runner-up to Williams.

At the 2016 Australian Open, where Williams beat her in the quarterfinals, Sharapova tested positive for the newly banned drug meldonium.

After initially being given a two-year suspension, Sharapova appealed to the Court of Arbitration for Sport, which reduced the penalty, ruling she bore "less than significant fault" in the case and could not "be considered to be an intentional doper."

Since returning from that suspension in 2017, Sharapova managed to reach only one Slam quarterfinal.

Her 6-3, 6-4 loss to Donna Vekic at Melbourne last month sent Sharapova's ranking tumbling outside of the top 350 – she is 373rd this week.

Asked after that defeat whether it might have been her last appearance at the Australian Open, Sharapova repeatedly replied with, "I don't know."

"I put in all the right work. There is no guarantee that even when you do all of those things, that you're guaranteed victory in a first round or in the third round or in the final. That's the name of this game," Sharapova said after what turned out to be her final match. "That's why it's so special to be a champion, even for one time."

A little more than a month later, she told the world she was done with her playing career.

"Tennis showed me the world – and it showed me what I was made of. It's how I tested myself and how I measured my growth," Sharapova wrote on Twitter on Wednesday. "And so in whatever I might choose for my next chapter, my next mountain, I'll still be pushing. I'll still be climbing. I'll still be growing."

HONDA

There are a few safe bets for this week at the Honda: Nobody is going to run away with the tournament, and it'll be a shock if someone leaves town Sunday night after carding four rounds in the 60s.

This will be the 14th time that the Honda is played on PGA National's Champion course; in the previous 13, four titles were decided in playoffs and only twice did the winner prevail by more than two shots. Nobody had four rounds in the 60s last year or in 2018; only seven players pulled off that feat between 2010 and 2017.

Par is never disappointing at PGA National: Last year, players broke par on 17 percent of their holes played, and gave back at least one stroke 19 percent of the time.

"The golf course has always been pretty good," said Brooks Koepka, who finished tied for second at the Honda last year and, at No. 3, is the highest-ranked player in this year's field. "It's tough. I like that."

And while the Bear Trap is a problem, none of those holes ranked even among the toughest five on the course last year. The par-4, 479-yard 6th played to an average of 4.37 in last year's tournament, making it the fourth-toughest hole on tour last season. The par-4, 450-yard 11th, the par-4, 508-yard 10th, the par-4, 465-yard 14th and the par-3, 217-yard fifth all proved tougher than anything in the Bear Trap as well.

But Woodland saw a bright side: The tests this week are a great primer for what looms on the not-too-distant schedule.

"I like getting to be able to hit some shots, some pressure shots before leading up to The Players and the Masters right around the corner," Woodland said. "It's nice for me to get some mental confidence going on a tough golf course."

Viktor Hovland, who got his first PGA Tour win last weekend in Puerto Rico, had never played PGA National until a late-afternoon round Tuesday. He started on the back nine, putting his tee ball on the 10th into the lip of a bunker about 260 yards away and 235 yards to the flag.

"I was like, 'Well, this is a pretty easy par-5 if I just catch one,'" Hovland said.

That's when he was told the 10th is a par-4. In other words: Welcome to PGA National.

"There's a lot of really tough holes out there," Hovland said.

NOTES: Koepka is the only player in the field currently ranked among the world's top 10. ... A slew of big-name South Florida residents like Tiger Woods, Dustin Johnson, Justin Thomas and Rory McIlroy aren't playing this week. ... The Honda purse is up for a fourth straight year, now a record $7 million, which means a record $1.26 million is going to the winner. That's $36,000 more than Mitchell got last year.

A fire burns after an explosion at the Marathon Refinery in Carson on Tuesday.

Cause of LA-area refinery fire under investigation

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — The cause of an explosion and fire at the largest oil refinery on the West Coast was under investigation Wednesday as air quality authorities conducted laboratory testing to determine whether toxic gases were released.

No one was injured and there were no immediate indications that any toxins affected the community around the Marathon Petroleum refinery in Carson, just outside Los Angeles, authorities said.

It was not immediately clear whether the fire would push gasoline retail prices higher, as has happened after previous fires or unplanned shutdowns at California refineries.

The fire erupted late Tuesday night after an explosion in a cooling tower, according to the Los Angeles County Fire Department, which assisted the refinery's own firefighters.

"Air monitoring is ongoing, and no risk to the community has been identified," Marathon said in a statement.

The South Coast Air Quality Management District said the refinery has monitoring equipment installed around its perimeter and data showed no elevated levels of gaseous toxic substances.

In addition, initial measurements showed levels of particulate matter were within the typical range for the area.

Nonetheless, inspectors from the agency collected air samples that were being tested for toxic substances such as benzene, tetrachloroethylene, toluene and styrene, the air quality district said.

Marathon's Carson refinery is the largest on the West Coast with a crude oil capacity of 363,000 barrels daily, according to the company's website. It manufactures gasoline, diesel fuel, propane and other materials.

California wildfire victims fear coming last in PG&E payout

By MICHAEL LIEDTKE and DAISY NGUYEN
Associated Press

Eric Risberg / AP

Jason Meek, whose Northern California wine country home was destroyed in 2017, walks through the remains of his home on Tuesday in Santa Rosa, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO — A $13.5 billion settlement between victims of California's catastrophic wildfires and the utility blamed for causing them was supposed to bring some peace and hope to people still reeling from the devastation.

Instead, the deal has sparked confusion, resentment, suspicion and despair as the victims, government agencies and lawyers grapple for their piece of the pie.

More than 81,000 have filed claims to the settlement fund, setting the stage for a potential scrum as Pacific Gas & Electric scrambles to emerge from one of the most complex bankruptcy cases in U.S. history by June 30.

"How is it in any way fair that the actual victims of this fire, or any of the fires, are put at the very, very bottom of the priority list," Michelle Barker, 54, wrote in a recent letter to the bankruptcy judge overseeing the settlement.

Barker lost her home to the 2018 fire that nearly wiped out the town of Paradise.

Some of the tensions surfaced during a Wednesday hearing focused on whether federal and state agencies are entitled to tap the fund to recoup any of the roughly $4 billion they doled out after the wildfires. Health chain Adventist Health also is seeking at least $1 billion for losses from its heavily damaged hospital in Paradise, and lawyers could try to take up to a third.

Victims also are upset that half the settlement, or $6.75 billion, would be paid in stock from PG&E, the company responsible for ruining their lives.

The stock payment may prove a clever strategy, said San Francisco bankruptcy attorney Michael Sweet, because that could make it more difficult for California Gov. Gavin Newsom to follow through on threats of a government-backed takeover if PG&E doesn't make reforms.

A government takeover would likely cause the company's stock to drop, further diminishing the value of the victims' settlement.

"They are turning the victims into human shields," Sweet said. "You only go into bankruptcy because there isn't enough to go around for everyone."

In Wednesday's hearing, attorneys for the victims, PG&E, the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services spent more than two hours debating whether disaster-relief agencies should be able to draw on the victims' fund to cover the billions that they gave to help during and after the deadly wildfires.

The government agencies say taxpayers deserve to be reimbursed for footing the bill because years of willful neglect by PG&E resulted in dangerous power lines that ignited the wildfires. PG&E and the victims' attorneys contend the law doesn't allow them to make claims because the utility didn't intentionally cause the fires.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Dennis Montali didn't rule on the issue Wednesday but signaled he will soon.

Dozens are making passionate pleas to Montali asking him to rework a deal he approved in December. More than 1,600 wildfire victims signed an online petition calling the settlement unfair.

PG&E "is building off of our losses in a sense," said Jason Meek, 48, whose Northern California wine country home was destroyed in 2017. "It's important in my view that this settlement is done with thought and care."

The possibility of government agencies tapping the fund has outraged people still looking for places to live after losing their homes and, in some cases, still grieving loved ones who perished during the worst wildfires in modern U.S. history.

Montali, who also presided over PG&E's previous bankruptcy from 2001 to 2004, has never left any doubt that compensating the wildfire victims is his top priority in the new case, which began in January 2019. Claimants have since filed more than $50 billion in wildfire claims, which the utility has proposed settling for a total of $25.5 billion, which includes reimbursement for insurers and other things.

Attorneys representing the victims concede the settlement isn't perfect, but they say it's the best deal possible under the circumstances.

PG&E believes the misgivings about the settlement are being expressed by a vocal minority. In a Wednesday statement, the company reiterated it's belief that the deal "brings us one significant step closer to getting victims paid so they can rebuild their lives."

Still, there is a growing sentiment among victims that they're getting such a raw deal that they should reject it, even if that means waiting longer to be paid.

"I want you to know that many of us understand what is happening and that we will move heaven and earth to stop it," Lisa Williams, another survivor of the 2018 fire in Paradise that killed 85 people, vowed in a Feb. 6 letter.

Williams, 59, now lives in Las Vegas and started a wildfire victims group on Facebook opposing the current deal.

Compounding frustration over the plan to pay them in stock, PG&E agreed to an all-cash settlement of $11 billion to reimburse about 110 insurers for losses paid out to policyholders.

"Not only do we have to wait to get paid but we'd have to depend on the company's recovery," said Meek, who said he has moved many times since losing his house, and is nowhere close to rebuilding on his property. "If a fire comes again, what will happen to the stock price?"

The last time PG&E emerged from bankruptcy in April 2004, its stock more than doubled while paying out billions of dollars in dividends. PG&E's stock has sunk as low as $3.55 four months ago, but has since rebounded to $16 to $18 per share, largely on hopes the company will be able to deliver on its projection of record profits as it bounces back from bankruptcy.

Court documents say none of the victims will have to accept PG&E stock if they don't want it but the process for choosing an alternative hasn't been spelled out yet.

Sarah Bates, a 67-year-old former nurse who moved to Virginia after losing her Paradise home in 2018, said those affected the most are being "tossed aside."

"I don't have a lot of faith that I'm going to see any significant compensation at the end of it all," Bates said.

Lowe's disappoints on 4Q sales, full-year outlook

Sales associate Bob Henriques, of Framingham, Mass., moves items at a Lowe's retail home improvement and appliance store in Framingham in 2018.

NEW YORK — Lowe's Cos. on Wednesday reported weaker-than-expected sales for its fiscal fourth quarter and offered an annual forecast that came below Wall Street expectations.

During a call with analysts, Lowe's CEO Marvin Ellison blamed the sales shortfall on the timing of its marketing campaign that didn't align with the compressed holiday season. It's e-commerce website is also under major renovation. But Lowe's said that it's relaunching its website this spring and said that it is working to update the stores with better signage and other merchandising changes.

Shares in the company based in Mooresville, North Carolina, closed down more than 4 percent on Wednesday.

The report comes a day after strong results from rival Home Depot, which reported better-than-expected quarterly profits and sales.

The contrasting quarterly performances highlights the increasing competition between Home Depot and Lowe's, which is in the process of an overhaul under Ellison.

Ellison, a one-time Home Depot executive who took the top job at Lowe's in mid 2018, is trying to reshape the culture at Lowe's, which has been a distant second to Home Depot in the sector for a while. Ellison has been focusing on getting Lowe's back to the fundamentals of retailing, like making sure the right items are in stock and improving customer service.

"Though we are only one year into a multiyear plan, we made significant progress transforming our company and believe we are well positioned to capitalize on solid demand in a healthy home improvement market," Ellison said in a statement.

Ellison told analysts on the call that Lowe's is rolling out new signage in its stores, the first time it changed its signing in 15 years. It's also creating dedicated areas for seasonal merchandise like Halloween to make it easier for customers to shop.

As for the website overhaul, customers will be able to check out with one click. They will also be able to shop by collection. For example, in the past, shoppers buying patio furniture would have to shop on one screen for their table and another for the chairs, Ellison said.

Lowe's reported fiscal fourth-quarter net income of $509 million, after reporting a loss in the same period a year earlier.

The company said it had profit of 66 cents per share. Earnings, adjusted for non-recurring costs, came to 94 cents per share.

The results beat the average Wall Street estimate of 91 cents per share, based on an analyst survey by Zacks Investment Research.

The home improvement retailer posted revenue of $16.03 billion in the period, missing Street forecasts. Ten analysts surveyed by Zacks expected $16.15 billion.

Overall, sales at stores opened at least a year rose 2.5 percent for the quarter. The figure for the U.S. home improvement business increased 2.6 percent. Analysts were expecting 3.2 percent for the quarter, according to FactSet.

Lowe's that online sales was up 3 percent in the quarter but Lowe's expects high single-digit percentage growth during the second half of the fiscal year.

In comparison, sales at Home Depot stores open at least a year rose 5.2 percent, which was also better than analysts had expected. Those sales climbed 5.3 percent in the U.S.

Lowe's expects full-year earnings in the range of $6.45 to $6.65 per share. That's below the Street $6.67 per share estimate, according to FactSet.

Shares of Lowe's fell $5.22 to close at $113.30 Wednesday.

Creative pursuits should be at the top of your to-do list. Adjust your lifestyle to ensure that you get to do the things you enjoy, to work on the projects you feel passionate about and to be with the people who stimulate your mind. Let the past go and watch the future unfold.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A new attitude will help you put yourself first and get your plans in motion. Actions speak louder than words, and following through with your commitments will lead to success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't meddle in someone's private business, even if you are asked to do so. Problems with in-laws or relatives will cause friction between you and someone important. Stand by your loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you want a change, it's up to you to make it happen. Refuse to let someone else dictate what you do next. Do what's best for you and pursue your dreams.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Pay more attention to your personal life, health and what you can do to improve things. Romance is on the rise, and spending more time with someone you love will enhance your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful what you wish for. Don't push yourself too hard or take on too much. Moderation will be in your best interest. Make intelligent decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be in a generous mood. It's fun to entertain others, but don't let anyone take advantage of you. A loss is likely if you are frivolous or careless.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Add last-minute details that will give you the edge you are looking for when presenting what you have to offer. A positive change is within reach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A disagreement will have a lasting effect. It's best to keep the peace and get along with your peers. Romance should be a priority.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Social activity, pleasure trips or personal changes should be on your agenda. Someone you meet will make you think about new possibilities. Consider starting a new venture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't criticize others about their way of doing things. Roll up your shirtsleeves and do your part. You will gain allies if you are amicable. Romance is favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make practical changes and don't look back. Taking action will be more rewarding than sitting still and accomplishing nothing. Avoid getting into a debate with a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A little charm, a personal makeover and a healthy routine will help prepare you for what's to come. Don't let others' actions stop you from pursuing what's best for you.

Joey Logano, driver of the #22 Pennzoil Ford, takes the checkered flag to win the Cup Series Pennzoil 400 at Las Vegas Motor Speedway Sunday. JONATHAN FERREY FOR NASCAR

6 things we learned from whirlwind trip to Vegas

Team Penske's Joey Logano won the Pennzoil 400 at Las Vegas Motor Speedway on Sunday. He was followed by Matt DiBenedetto of Wood Brothers Racing and JTG Daugherty's Ricky Stenhouse Jr., who finished in second and third place, respectively. Here are four takeaways from the first of the West Coast races:

Logano

Less crashes, but chaotic restarts

Sunday's race saw significantly less contact between drivers after Monday's brutal Daytona 500. There were no major wrecks this weekend, but on two restarts cars immediately ran three and four wide.

Then, in the final two laps off the restart, Logano sprinted ahead and then won under caution on the last lap for his first victory of the season, while DiBenedetto squeezed past Hendrick Motorsports' William Byron. DiBenedetto moved into second place, fending off Stenhouse Jr., who finished just behind him.

"(This) is a great day for Wood Brothers and Team Penske," Logano said after the race. He also noted that a final push from Stenhouse Jr. on the restart made the difference.

"He shoved me ahead, which was great," Logano said. "And then the block on the 24 (Byron), that was the winning move, I was able to get down in front of him and then be able to separate myself a little bit from the field."

Logano has now won a race in every one of the last nine seasons.

First win for Team Penske

Hendrick Motorsports, led by Chase Elliott, dominated the first two stages, but when it mattered, Team Penske capitalized. The Ford cars, driven by Logano, Ryan Blaney and Brad Keselowkski ran in first, second and seventh respectively, in the final 20 laps. With 13 laps left, Blaney slid in front of Logano and the two battled just before a caution.

Logano, however, was able to move into first place and remain there riding on old tires. He did not pit in the final laps and instead sprinted to the end. The strategy paid off for Logano, while Blaney finished the race in 11th place. Keselowski finished seventh.

Ford also had a successful night from a manufacturer's standpoint with DiBenedetto taking second place (Team Penske and Wood Brothers Racing have a strategic partnership). Stewart-Haas Racing's Kevin Harvick also managed an eighth place finish.

A highlight night for Hendrick Motorsports

Neither back-to-back stage winner Chase Elliott nor seven-time Cup Series champion Jimmie Johnson won this year's Pennzoil 400, but both the fan favorite Elliott and veteran Johnson were able to earn a large chunk of points for Hendrick Motorsports in Las Vegas.

Until late in the third stage, Elliott led most of the race, but a flat tire caused him to pull out before the final caution. Elliott won both the first and second stages, while Hendrick Motorsports teammates Johnson, Byron and Alex Bowman all finished in the top 10 in those stages.

Johnson, Bowman, Byron and Elliott finished in fifth, 13th, 22nd, and 26th place, respectively.

Your Daytona 500 winner looked rough out West

Less than a week after winning his second consecutive Daytona 500, Hamlin returned to the track for a disappointing performance in Vegas. He finished in 17th place on Sunday, and at one point in the final stage was nearly lapped by Elliott, who was leading at the time.

Hamlin, who was in 24th place when Elliott edged behind him, was able to stay just in front of the No. 9 car, but he never broke into the top ten, proving he has found more success on the superspeedways.

Bad break

Chase Elliott appeared to be the driver to beat through the first two stages, both wins. But his shot to win the race ended after a tire issue following a pit stop from the lead caused Elliott to hit the wall. He had led five different times for 70 laps, with the two stage victories, before heading to pit road for repairs. He finished 26th.

Bounce back for Blaney

An emotional week for Ryan Blaney ended with an 11th place finish and Blaney moving toward closure after Ryan Newman's crash on the final lap of Monday night's Daytona 500.

It was contact from Blaney that triggered Newman's crash, and Blaney said Sunday morning before the race he struggled in the first few days over his role in the accident.

Newman

"I talked to his dad and said when he's feeling better, I'd like to talk to Ryan," Blaney said. "Ryan called me Wednesday and just talking to him, hearing him, really made things easier."

It is not determined if Newman will be back in his car Sunday, or if the team will use a replacement driver again.

Blaney said he'd never before been involved in such a violent crash and the potential of Newman being hurt rattled him.

"You never want to see something like that, especially coming off your own nose," Blaney said.

Blaney thought he had a shot to win the race until he was one of the drivers to pit on the final stop and he failed to make up the difference with his fresh tires.

WINNER'S QUOTE

"I'm not really sure what I was supposed to do (on the last pit call), but, boy, we fought hard for this one … and then to get this finish with Matt DiBennedetto finishing second is great day for Wood Brothers and Team Penske. Nothing like winning in front of this amazing crowd. Man, this is a huge win, and nice to kick off the season with a W."

— Joey Logano, who found a way to defend last year's victory in Sunday's Pennzoil 400 Cup Series race at Las Vegas. Logano sped away after a restart on Lap 266 of 267 and led runner-up Matt DiBenedetto to the finish under caution to win for the second time at Las Vegas, the first time this season and the 24th time in his career.

Xfinity: Briscoe chases away the rain for Vegas W

Chase Briscoe took Sunday's rain-delayed Boyd Gaming 300 at Las Vegas Motor Speedway, winning the battle between the only two Fords in the race.

The driver of the No. 98 Stewart-Haas Racing Mustang held the lead after the final restart on Lap 169 of 200, beating fellow Ford driver Austin Cindric to the finish line by 2.874 seconds.

The victory was Briscoe's third in the series and his first at a 1.5-mile intermediate speedway.

Ryan Sieg finished third, followed by Noah Gragson and Harrison Burton.

"It's definitely nice to get one early," Briscoe said. "Now maybe we can go to California next week and win on a 2-mile track (Auto Club Speedway)."

The race was delayed by rain after completion of the first stage, won by Briscoe, Saturday afternoon. The resumption came at later Sunday after completion of the Cup Series race.

'It's nice to get the points lead. It's early in the season, yeah, but it's a big confidence boost for all the guys.' – Chase Briscoe

Justin Allgaier took the lead after the start of Stage 2, but Cindric grabbed the top spot on Lap 124, powering past Allgaier on the inside near the start-finish line. Cindric retained the lead after a cycle of green-flag pit stops, but when contact from Gragson's Chevrolet sent Myatt Snider spinning on the frontstretch on Lap 162, Briscoe had the opportunity he needed to regain the lead on the final restart.

Allgaier led 63 laps, and Cindric had 39. Briscoe, who led a race-high 89 laps, leaves Las Vegas with a seven-point series lead over Gragson, last week's winner at Daytona International Speedway.

"Obviously, we were hoping to win sometime this year — we expected to — but to get it before Phoenix (Raceway) is nice because we can go there (in two weeks) and try some stuff," Briscoe said. "That's one place that we need to get way better at.

"That being said, it's nice to get the points lead. It's early in the season, yeah, but it's a big confidence boost for all the guys."

Trucks: Imagine that, Kyle Busch dominates

Kyle Busch led seven times for 108 of the 134 laps in the Strat 200 Trucks race at Las Vegas Motor Speedway, his home track.

About the only difficulty he had was clearing Sheldon Creed on consecutive restarts in the final stage of the race. But five laps into a run, Busch was gone.

Busch started a seven-race streak in 2018 at Pocono. He won all five of his Gander Trucks starts last year and started 2020 with the hometown victory.

After the last restart on Lap 96, Busch pulled out to a lead of more than 7.8 seconds over polesitter and race runner-up Johnny Sauter. His winning margin over Sauter was 5.958 seconds. The victory was Busch's 57th, extending his own record in the series, and his second straight at LVMS.

"Once we got about 10 laps in, we started to check away from everybody. This Tundra was awesome — it really had great long-run speed," Busch said.

Last week's Daytona winner, Grant Enfinger, fell out early after Raphael Lessard's Toyota broke loose in the bottom lane and carried both trucks into the outside wall. Lessard and Enfinger finished 30th and 31st, respectively.

Zane Smith, Todd Gilliland, Gray, Stewart Friesen and Creed completed the top 10.

A STORY ABOUT LOVE

Penguins play tells tale of same-sex penguin couple

By ALEXANDRA NEWMAN
HP Staff Writer

BENTON HARBOR — Families come in all shapes, color and sizes, and live all over this planet.

Some of those families live together in houses or apartments, and some live in zoos.

Penguins, the show coming to the Lake Michigan College Mendel Center Mainstage Theatre on Sunday, will showcase one of those zoo families.

"It's a story about love," Paul Bosco McEneaney, artistic director and creator of Penguins, said in a recent phone interview from Northern Ireland.

McEneaney created Penguins after hearing about the true story of Roy and Silo, two male chinstrap penguins who lived at New York's Central Park Zoo.

"I was in the U.S., and a colleague told me about these penguins in the zoo that looked around at all the other penguins and chose to play with each other," he said. "They wanted to take care of a rock, but a zookeeper switched out the rock with an egg for them to take care of. They did. It hatched, and they lived happily ever after."

McEneaney took this back to his theater company, Cahoots NI.

"It really resonated with me

WEEKEND HIGHLIGHTS

Winter Delights returns to Lake Michigan College

BENTON TOWNSHIP — An all-day winter festival with music, food, drinks and shopping will return to The Mendel Center at Lake Michigan College on Saturday.

Winter Delights begins at 1 p.m., and goes through the evening. The event will feature musical by Six Appeal, JigJam, The Reminders and Bryan Lubeck.

Six Appeal is an award-winning a cappella ensemble that combines music and comedic timing with the energy of a rock band. They will span multiple decades and genres of music, from classic hits to current chart toppers to catchy original tunes – using only their vocals.

JigJam is an award-winning quartet from Ireland. Blending the best of traditional Irish music with bluegrass and Americana they've forged a new genre that's been branded "I-Grass."

The Reminders are a musical duo that blend soulful sounds and roots music with insightful messages and thoughtful lyrics. The group consists of Brussels-born emcee Big Samir and Queens-born emcee/vocalist Aja Black.

Lubeck has been a staple of the Southwest Michigan music scene for years, headlining events like Smooth Jazz at Sunset and frequently popping up at The Mendel Center, The Acorn Theater and the Box Factory for the Arts. He uses his Spanish guitar, urban grooves and pop vocals to create contemporary jazz.

Winter Delights also will have beer, cider, wine and food available in Grand Upton Hall, as well as a pop-up artisan market.

All-access passes are $50 in advance and $60 the day of the event.

Mainstage access for three of the concerts is $30 in advance and $35 day of. Grand Upton Hall access for the headliner, food, drink and market is the same price, but offers a $20 designated driver option.

Wife grows anxious as man grows closer to her sister

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to my husband for 21 years. We've had our ups and downs, but our relationship is solid.

For the last year, I have watched as my husband has become closer to my sister. It started with phone calls every once in a while to check on how she's doing. (She lives in our second home in a different state.) Then it turned into hours-long conversations a few times a week. When I told him it made me very uncomfortable, he said they are just "very, very good friends."

Jeanne Phillips
Dear Abby

About six months ago, he started calling me by her name at inappropriate times. I told him he has been murmuring her name in my ear while we're in bed. He said he was sorry, and he would make some changes to the relationship with my sister. The changes he made were to talk to her every night for hours at a time. Then he needed to go to our other house "to get it ready for winter." He was alone with her for two weeks and then extended his stay by another week because she is "having health issues."

I told him I think he's having an emotional affair with my sister, but he disagreed. I'm in constant panic mode and don't know what to do. Any advice? – Suspicious In The Northwest

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I don't blame you for being as upset as you are because, to say the least, what your husband has been doing is inappropriate. Have you talked to your sister about this? If you haven't, you should.

I am surprised that you didn't go with him when he went to visit "Sissy" and help her with her "health issues." That he extended his stay with her makes me wonder if there may be more going on than an emotional affair.

You need more support than a newspaper column can provide. Make an appointment with a licensed marriage and family therapist, if only to calm your panic and gain an ally. If you can convince your husband to go, it might allay your fears. But if he isn't interested – go alone.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dream job and enjoy every part of it, except for the lunch hour. The time for my break isn't debatable, nor is the area. We have a specific area for eating, and we aren't supposed to bring food to our work station.

During lunch time, seven to 10 people talk politics every day. It doesn't help that we are on opposite sides of the fence, but even if we weren't, I'm tired of all the nastiness on both sides.

I have politely asked them to discuss topics other than politics. I even talked to my boss about it, but he said it's not up to him what people talk about on their down time. Sometimes he joins us in the lunchroom and contributes to the topic. One of my co-workers is eight months pregnant, and she gets so worked up, I worry she'll go into premature labor. What should my next step, short of quitting, be? – Losing My Appetite

DEAR LOSING: Unless there is a rule specifying that you must eat your lunch inside the office, consider taking your lunch break outside. When the weather is mild, it could be a nice, quiet break. If it's too cold to eat outside, you could do it in your car and listen to music. However, if that's not possible, the solution to your problem might be as simple as noise-canceling headphones.

Grab that big moment

HI, CAROLYN: I have a hobby I'm passionate about, and that with a LOT of luck and hard work could someday become a career, or a side career. I also have a full-time job, a side gig, a husband and a baby, so I'm not exactly swimming in extra time or energy, or money, to dedicate to this hobby.

That said, I just got the news that I've been accepted to a short-term program that MIGHT help things along with this hobby-passion.

Carolyn Hax

If I didn't have the jobs and the husband and the baby, it would be a no-brainer; I'd spend the money and attend the program. But I am having a hard time feeling okay about doing that under my actual circumstances.

I'm the main breadwinner. Taking unpaid time off from work and spending money to travel and attend the program is an extravagance. I don't want to be away from the baby for that long. And it feels rather self-indulgent to put that kind of effort toward something that in the long run might never go anywhere.

I owe the program a decision within a couple of days, and right now I'm feeling scattered and stressed and frankly sort of sad about it – wishing I hadn't been accepted at all, that sort of thing. Do you have any thoughts that might help me get my mind moving in a productive direction? - Scattered and Stressed

SCATTERED AND STRESSED: OK, you've given all the reasons not to go. Now say to yourself, "Dammit, I am going," and figure it out. Like, this afternoon, on a yellow lined scribble pad, in to-do list form.

You owe yourself that.

You owe your family that, because feeling as if you can't grab your big moment even just once is a soul-killer.

And you owe Life that, because it doesn't throw us these opportunities every day, and it pouts when its efforts are ignored because we don't want to pay the 2 dollars.

If you can't, then you can't. Oh, well. Sometimes the yellow scribble pad gives us bad news. And/or, sometimes it shows us that we didn't want to go as badly as we thought. But if all it will mean is for you and your husband to put up with some temporary discomforts, then, aren't you going to regret not trying to make it work?

HI, CAROLYN: Any recommendation on how to approach Mommy going on a one-nighter with her best friends to Palm Springs? My son is 8 and he loves weekend family time and I don't want to hurt his feelings. - Mommy

MOMMY: OMG. You say, "I'm going on an overnight with my best friends, and I can't wait!"

That's it. You do not have to explain that you are human and have friends. You certainly don't have to – and shouldn't, please! – encourage the idea that your spending time with friends involves taking something away from him emotionally.

You will take a lot of the edge off without saying anything if you make it normal that you spend solo time with your friends occasionally, just as he does with his (presumably you don't hop on the PS4 with him and his pals?).

And if he does say something? "I'll miss you! (hug) And I'll see you tomorrow."

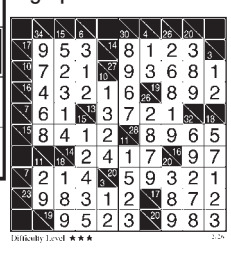
How to play: Numbers above the slash are across clues; numbers below the slash are down clues. The goal is to enter digits 1-9 in the white cells to add up to the number clues. You cannot use any digit more than once when adding up to a clue.



BRIDGE

The Duke of Wellington was discussing war, but with a small change we can make an equally valid point about bridge: All the business of bridge is to endeavor to find out what you don't know by what you do.

In other words, as you play out a deal, you learn more about the opponents' hands and should use this information.

Against four hearts, West led the club 10. East won the first trick with the ace, cashed the club king (the accepted way of showing a doubleton) and exited with a diamond.

With a guaranteed spade loser, declarer had to find the trump queen to make his contract. Assuming West had five clubs to East's two, there were 11 empty spaces in East's hand for the heart queen, but only eight in West's hand. However, those 11-to-8 odds weren't good enough for South. He wanted to find out more about the distribution before committing himself.

Judging that West would have led a singleton diamond if he had one, declarer overtook the diamond king with dummy's ace and discarded his club queen on the diamond queen. Now came the spade queen from the board. East won with the ace and returned a diamond.

South ruffed with the heart ace, cashed the spade king, discarding dummy's club loser, then led the heart eight and ran it. When it won, he repeated the heart finesse, drew West's last trump and claimed.

Why was South so confident about the hearts? Because East had passed as dealer and had already shown up with 11 points: the club ace-king and spade ace. He couldn't hold a queen as well.

Church documentary has been canceled

BENTON HARBOR — A documentary film that was set to start shooting this weekend in Southwest Michigan has been canceled.

Creator Jerret Hammons said in an email Tuesday that the project is over because the production company cut the film, and with it the budget.

The film, to be released on Netflix, was going to follow the creation of a new church that would meet Sunday mornings at The GhostLight Theatre.

Hammons hoped eventually the church would be able to sustain itself and the film would tell the story of its success.

He did not say if he and his team would seek other ways to get the film funded.

SAM to co-host classical concert

NEW BUFFALO — The School of American Music will present "Dreams and Visions," an oboe, viola and piano program featuring oboist Jennet Ingle, to Converge Community Church, 601 W. Buffalo St.

The 7 p.m. Friday concert, part of SAM's Free Family Concert Series, will feature the world premiere of a trio, also titled "Dreams and Visions," by Marjorie Rusche.

The program is a collaboration between SAM and the Michigan City Chamber Music Festival.

Besides Ingle, the trio consists of Rachel Goff on viola and Mariah Boucher on piano.

The concerts is free, but attendees are encouraged to pick up tickets in advance. Tickets are available online at schoolofamericanmusic.com.

Bob Rowe to be featured on radio

Southwest Michigan singer/songwriter Bob Rowe will be featured at the end of this month in a worldwide radio release that will include folk icon Judy Collins and other well-known folk and roots performers.

The release will be distributed to more than 1,300 folk, roots, Americana and Bluegrass stations internationally, according to Rowe.

"They will be using my version of the old folk/gospel classic, 'This Train,'" he said.

In addition to the radio release, Rowe's version of the classical opera song Panis Angelicus now is available on iTunes, Spotify, Pandora, Amazon and other internet music sites.

All proceeds from the sale of the single will go to Renaissance Enterprises, which brings music and arts programs to nursing homes and senior care facilities.

Bob and his group, The Green Valley Boys, will begin work on a new album this summer featuring new Rowe originals as well as standards they perform live.

A documentary is also in the works for PBS for release later in 2020.

Musical Club to feature LaSte' Duo

ST. JOSEPH — The Monday Musical Club's 7 p.m. Monday program will feature the LaSte' Duo – steel drummer Lana D. Wordel and violist Nora R. Frisk.

Their free performance at First Congregational Church, 2001 Niles Ave., entitled "Classical to Calypso," is open to the public.

Though each instrument has its own genre, the duo does not limit itself to any style, and are equally happy to play classical or calypso.

LaSte' was a guest artist with the Wisconsin Chamber Orchestra for its summer series, which is attended by 20,000-50,000 people each week.

For more information, visit mmcmi.org.

Tickets on sale for 'Women of Lockerbie'

ST. JOSEPH — Tickets are now on sale for the Twin City Players' next production, "The Women of Lockerbie," which will be staged between March 20 and April 5.

Tickets are $12-$15, and are available online at www.twincityplayers.org or by calling 429-0400.

The show, directed by Kraig Kirkdorfer, contains adult themes and language.

Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays at the Playhouse, 600 W. Glenlord Road.

"The Women of Lockerbie" transports the audience to the hills of Scotland seven years after Pan Am Flight 103 was destroyed in 1988 by a terrorist bomb and crashed into the small village.

It tells the plight of a mother from New Jersey traveling to Scotland to find her son's remains.

Inspired by the true story, the characters and situations in the play are fictional.

Copeland to headline St. Joseph festival

ST. JOSEPH — Blues singer Shemekia Copeland will headline BBQ, Blues and Bluegrass on May 16 at Whirlpool Centennial Park, 200 Broad St.

The festival will include continuous music, barbecue, regional craft brews and wines from noon-8 p.m.

Copeland, the 2019 Blues Music Awards Album of the Year winner, is one of five blues and bluegrass bands scheduled for the rain-or-shine event:

- Dustbowl Revival will perform its boundary-pushing take on American roots bluegrass music.
- Michigan-based 18-year-old Jake Kershaw will take the stage with his performance of classic blues and blues with a rock edge.
- Old Salt Union, a non-traditional string band, will play its progressive bluegrass string music.
- And Grand Rapids-based band The Crane Wives will showcase their four-person folk/Americana set.

Tickets, which are $20 in advance or $25 the day of the festival, go on sale March 2.

There is an additional charge for drink tickets on site.

Food will be available for cash purchase.

Ticket will be available online at stjoetoday.com/bbq or at the Welcome Center, 301 State St.

GhostLight Theatre stages six 10-minute plays

BENTON HARBOR — There are three opportunities to see a set of six 10-minute plays this weekend at The GhostLight Theatre, 101 Hinkley St.

"Facing Our Truth: Ten Minute Plays on Trayvon, Race and Privilege" will open at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow, and return at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday.

The staged readings were commissioned by The New Black Fest in 2013 after the George Zimmerman verdict. The six diverse plays explore the topics of Trayvon Martin, race and/or privilege to promote discussion in communities on those issues.

Following the plays, there will be a moderated community discussion where the audience is encouraged to participate with area leaders.

The six plays are "Night Vision," directed by Michael Travier Jr.; "Some Other Kid," directed by Travier and Paul Mow; "Colored," directed by RJ Williams and Mow; "The Ballad of George Zimmerman," directed by Dan Maxon; "Dressing," directed by Mow; and "No More Monsters Here," directed by Kendra Ann.

Doors open 30 minutes prior to the performances.

Tickets are on sale at www.GhostLightBH.com/events, and are $15, $10 for seniors, and $5 for students with valid ID.

For more information, call 252-5222.

"Facing Our Truth: Ten Minute Plays on Trayvon, Race and Privilege" will include "The Ballad of George Zimmerman," which will feature Landon Horne as Trayvon Martin and Dan Maxon as Zimmerman.

'Proclaiming Emancipation' opens at Heritage Museum

ST. JOSEPH — An exhibition exploring the Emancipation Proclamation will open tonight in celebration of Black History Month.

"Proclaiming Emancipation" will open with an exhibition preview, cocktail reception and public lecture at The Heritage Museum and Cultural Center, 601 Main St.

The cocktail reception from 5-6:45 p.m. will allow attendees to view the exhibit at their own pace and interact with members of the 102nd U.S. Colored Troops history group.

The re-enactors will share their passion for the Civil War, and answer questions about the period.

At 7 p.m., Anna-Lisa Cox will present a lecture, "Pioneers and Patriots: The Hidden Histories of Michigan's Black Founding Citizens."

Cox is a non-resident Fellow at Harvard University's Hutchins Center for African and African American Research.

Her original research underpinned two exhibits at the Smithsonian's National Museum of African American History and Culture.

In addition, her book, "The Bone and Sinew of the Land," will be available for purchase and signing.

The event is free and open to the public, with a $5 suggested donation.

For more information about the exhibit, visit theheritagemcc.org or call 983-1191.

PENGUINS

because I live in Northern Ireland," he said. "Southern Ireland had, at just about the same time, legalized same sex marriage, so it was a conversation in Northern Ireland that it wasn't going to happen here."

Cahoots NI focuses on creating theater pieces that are accessible for children.

"I thought it was a timely intervention," McEneaney said. "And I thought it was really relevant to our young people and what was happening in society."

So McEneaney got started on a story board, and worked out the show with a choreographer from Spain.

"It was all about the movement, not dialogue," he said. "Movement has an ambiguity, and I saw a different connection. It's not entirely literal. The audience can take from movement many different feelings and messages. So I knew instinctually it had to be a movement piece."

Penguins relies completely on the actors movements and the music.

"We made it highly visual, all of Cahoots work is highly visual, and then we had the piece," McEneaney said.

Corey Ann, Osian Meilir and Jack Webb perform in Penguins.

The performance follows the two male penguins as they take care of their egg and as it hatches into a little girl penguin. McEneaney said this is one his favorite parts of the show.

"It's beautiful. I love it whenever we perform this for families, because it's often children with one or both of their parents," he said. "The child is experiencing this piece of theater from more of the little chick's point of view, and the parents see it from their point of view, remembering when their child is born."

On stage, the actress that plays the baby penguin, Olivia Van Niekerk, does a ballet that symbolizes the birth of the penguin.

"Olivia is a ballet dancer, and it's just exquisite and beautiful," McEneaney said. "The show builds to that moment. There's a false start, and then suddenly it hatches, and they become a family. It's a very heartwarming moment in the piece."

He said creating moments like that without dialogue is challenging, but rewarding.

"There's something about a nonverbal piece where the children almost create the words from what's happening or their perception of what's happening," McEneaney said. "I've created a few productions like this, stories about love and friendship, and the story beats are very clear. Sometimes music, movement and choreography can convey all of those things better than words."

Another element of Penguins is that it offers a sensory-friendly version, like it will this Sunday at 1 p.m.

"It's something we do all the time back home," McEneaney said. "When we tour here, it's very important to us. It's starting to happen a lot more in the U.S."

There are many reasons and conditions where people may feel uncomfortable by the loud music or bright lights during a stage show, or who can't be quiet for an hour.

"A sensory-friendly performance gives everyone an opportunity to see live theater," McEneaney said. "The music won't be loud, and the actors will come out before the show to explain what's going to happen, so there's no unexpected moments and the theater can feel like a safer environment."

He said whether you attend the sensory-friendly show, or the full light and sound production later in the day, it offers a chance for children to think about what is the true definition of the word "family."

"Penguins is really a story about love. It's about family," McEneaney said. "That's a good thing in this world. We need more of it."

THE HOPEFUL HOME FUND

The County of Berrien is pleased to announce the creation of a new fund for those wishing to help individuals (and families) that might be in jeopardy of losing a home due to property tax arrears. This comes because of a story about 88-year old Mildred Gray. In June of 2018, Ms. Gray of Niles walked 1.2 miles to meet with Berrien County Treasurer Bret Witkowski at his Niles office. Mildred needed to sign up for a monthly payment plan to save her house, that had been in her family for over 50 years.

To donate to THE HOPEFUL HOME FUND, please send check to: UWSM - 2015 Lakeview Ave, St. Joseph, MI, 49085. Please make reference to Hopeful Home Fund on check. For donations with credit card, please call: (269) 982-1700.

THE HOPEFUL HOME FUND

The County of Berrien is pleased to announce the creation of a new fund for those wishing to help individuals (and families) that might be in jeopardy of losing a home due to property tax arrears. This comes because of a story about 88-year old Mildred Gray. In June of 2018, Ms. Gray of Niles walked 1.2 miles to meet with Berrien County Treasurer Bret Witkowski at his Niles office. Mildred needed to sign up for a monthly payment plan to save her house, that had been in her family for over 50 years.

To donate to THE HOPEFUL HOME FUND, please send check to: UWSM - 2015 Lakeview Ave, St. Joseph, MI, 49085. Please make reference to Hopeful Home Fund on check. For donations with credit card, please call: (269) 982-1700.
